Her father is an inventor who, one day, invents this machine that can make any item either grow, or shrink, from its original size, but Carol Anne becomes an unwitting guinea-pig when the family cat, named Snowy, knocks the machine, called a re-atomizer, over, activating the machine, and turning Carol Anne into a doll-house figurine miniature of herself, and she must now live in her doll-house and watch out for dangers that were mere minor annoyances to her in the past, including the family cat, who turns on her. Can Carol Anne survive until her father can get the needed replacement parts to make the re-atomizer work again, or will Carol Anne be relegated to living her life in her doll-house, in total and abject fear of her surroundings? You Can't Catch Me Sherry Moss Walraven 2023-09-13 Oh no, I just saw the serial killer walk behind that tall tree. Run as fast as you can, girls. We can't let him see us! They really didn't know how they got in this unusual predicament, but they sure wanted to be finished with it. The FBI came and told the ladies they needed to be put in the Witness Protection Program because the crazy serial killer wanted to kill all the girls so they wouldn't testify against him due to them seeing the man shoot a young girl in a convenience store. The eight cousins go on an annual vacation together in the summer for fun. So far, this has not been a fun vacation. The crazy wanted to kill them. Would the girls get away from the insane man? Would he find them and do what he thought had to be done.

Stand Tall, Little Girl Hope Virgo 2021-11-25 For four years, Hope Virgo fought a gruelling internal battle, keeping her anorexia hidden from friends and family. Having pushed her health to breaking point, and with her skin turning yellow and her heart failing, it became impossible to hide. Barely recognisable, Hope was admitted to a mental health hospital in 2007. Twelve years on, Hope has been in recovery from anorexia for over a decade. But it hasn't always been an easy ride, and after a relapse in 2016 where she was refused help for 'not being thin enough', she knew she needed to raise awareness about the disease that almost took her life. And so, in August 2018, Hope launched the #DumpTheScales campaign, which calls on the government to review their guidance on support for eating disorders. Since then, with relentless campaigning, her petition has gained over 70,000 signatures and counting. Stand Tall, Little Girl is the inspiring account of how Hope fought back from rock bottom, built a healthy life for herself, and used her story to effect real change for others suffering from the same devastating condition. 'Hope writes with incredible honesty and openness, her journey is truly inspirational' Jonny Benjamin, MBE. 'Both insightful and an inspirational story of recovery. This is a must read book' Dame Kelly Holmes.

MONOLITH Roy Woodward 2014-06-05 Monolith presents six highly unusual short stories by a former Hollywood writer who was approved by famous Cecil B. DeMille. "Marvelous House of Infinite Joy" is a fictional love story based on fact. It tells the tale of Olympic gold medalist husband and wife Jami and Clint O'Connell, exploring her death from cancer, her status as she demands to return to Clint, and her heaven. "Martine Salvatore" tells the tale of a bitter private investigator and a martial arts pro team, with millionaire Ranch Meadows who just buried his murdered parents. A fortune of graphite deposits on Ranch's property reeks of deadly involvement. Martine and Ranch travel worldwide, dodging death and trying not to fall in bed. "Immortality: The I Word" explores what the Bible, Talmud, Koran, Sumerian codices, and science labs have in common. It considers contradictions in the Genesis story of the Garden of Eden and in E.din of Sumeria. A jealous alien fooled Moses using True Source's high tech? This is a robust reach into blasphemy or reality, revising reincarnation proofs along the way. "Sunrise" shares inspirations to make your day—and probably your life. In "All Together Now: Together Now" Lemuria and Atlantis go down, and seismologists come back to alert us. The ridiculed Planet X becomes clarified despite NASA's denials and air brushing games. A disaster that hits every 3,600 years is on course now, hidden by our sun's glare. "Roy" explores the writer's enigma, something that he ran from for years. There were details prophesied about him by Irish, Scottish, and British prophets, as well as Nostradamus. Today millions say such a president must bring compassion back to government. Is this that man?

The Girl Crusoes: A Story of the South Seas Herbert Strang At noon on a day late in September, the express train from London rested, panting and impatient, for a brief halt at the little countryside station of Poppicombe. The arrival and departure of this train was the event of the day to most of the inhabitants, not only of Poppicombe, but of the surrounding villages. There were quite half-a-dozen people standing on the platform, and the station staff, consisting of two men and a boy, were moving about briskly. One man was busily engaged in handing various newspapers and packages, which had been thrown from the guard's van, to the people who had been awaiting them; the other man, the stationmaster, was exchanging a few words with the guard, at the end of the platform; while the boy porter, looking about disconsolately for some doors to bang, distinguished himself by suddenly slamming the open door of the luggage van, much to the astonishment of the guard. As soon as the train had rumbled away, the young porter seized a newspaper from a pile standing on a trolley, opened it at a particular page, and, after reading a few words, let forth a wild war-whoop. Then, in spite of the glare in the stationmaster's eye, he rushed madly out of the station and looked excitedly up Longhill Avenue. There in the distance he saw, coming slowly towards the station, a young girl of twelve or thirteen years of age, seated upon a sturdy Exmoor pony. Although she sat her mount with the ease that comes only to the born rider, a close observer would have noticed that the slight droop about her slim young shoulders became more pronounced as she neared her destination. She was dressed in black, and her plain wide-brimmed sailor hat was trimmed only with a narrow band of crape. She rode forward with an eye that seemed to ignore all outward objects, her thin, small-featured face betokening a mood of deep despondency. Her errand had been the same for many days, and day after day she had met with nothing but disappointment. A few weeks ago she had taken the journey at a canter. Now, in spite of her natural high spirits, Tommy, as she was called by her family and friends, held the reins in such a listless fashion that the pony merely sauntered through the Avenue, as though he too shared her depression. Her lack of vigour was perhaps the more noticeable because her thin, wiry body looked framed for energy. There was an unmistakable air of health about the young girlish figure, but Tommy, although she was quite unconscious of it, was suffering from fatigue of the spirit. She had borne up bravely enough at first, but successive daily disappointments had at length proved too much for her. Now Longhill Avenue does not belie its name. It has a hill, and the hill is long and gently sloping, with rows of tall chestnut-trees on either side. When Tommy had reached the foot of the hill, she suddenly became aware that some one was shouting lustily. She started, and looking up quickly, saw a quaint little figure, dressed in corduroys, with a peaked cap much too large for him, wildly waving a paper, and rushing towards her from the station yard as fast as hobnailed boots allowed. She touched up her pony and was soon within hail of the freckled, rosy-cheeked young porter, whose face was spread abroad with smiles.

since the tide, flowing up from the Southwold harbour, where it runs into the sea between that ancient town and the hamlet of Walberswick, had broken up the ice. But all else was set hard and fast, and now toward sunset the cold was bitter. Stark and naked stood the tall, dry reeds. The blackbirds and starlings perched upon the willows seemed swollen into feathery balls, the fur started on the backs of hares, and a four-horse wain could travel in safety over swamps where at any other time a schoolboy dared not set his foot. On such an eve, with snow threatening, the great marsh was utterly desolate, and this was why these two had chosen it for their meeting place. To look on they were a goodly pair—the girl, who was clothed in the red she always wore, tall, dark, well shaped, with large black eyes and a determined face, one who would make a very stately woman; the man broad shouldered, with grey eyes that were quick and almost fierce, long limbed, hard, agile, and healthy, one who had never known sickness, who looked as though the world were his own to master. He was young, but three-and-twenty that day, and his simple dress, a tunic of thick wool fastened round him with a leathern belt, to which hung a short sword, showed that his degree was modest. The girl, although she seemed his elder, in fact was only in her twentieth year. Yet from her who had been reared in the hard school of that cruel age childhood had long departed, leaving her a ripened woman before her time. This pair stood looking at each other. "Well, Cousin Eve Clavering," said the man, in his clear voice, "why did your message bid me meet you in this cold place?" "Because I had a word to say to you, Cousin Hugh de Cressi," she answered boldly; "and the marsh being so cold and so lonesome I thought it suited to my purpose. Does Grey Dick watch yonder?" "Ay, behind those willows, arrow on string, and God help him on whom Dick draws! But what was that word, Eve?" "One easy to understand," she replied, looking him in the eyes— "Farewell!" He shivered as though with the cold, and his face changed. "An ill birthday greeting, yet I feared it," he muttered huskily, "but why more now than at any other time?" "Would you know, Hugh? Well, the story is short, so I'll let it out. Our great-grandmother, the heiress of the de Cheney's, married twice, did she not, and from the first husband came the de Cressis, and from the second the Claverings. But in this way or in that we Claverings got the lands, or most of them, and you de Cressis, the nobler stock, took to merchandise. Now since those days you have grown rich with your fishing fleets, your wool mart, and your ferry dues at Walberswick and Southwold. We, too, are rich in manors and land, counting our acres by the thousand, but yet poor, lacking your gold, though yonder manor"-and she pointed to some towers which rose far away above the trees upon the high land-"has many mouths to feed. Also the sea has robbed us at Dunwich, where I was born, taking our great house and sundry streets that paid us rent, and your market of Southwold has starved out ours at Blythburgh."
