Metric Pattern Cutting for Children's Wear and Babywear

Winifred Aldrich 2009-07-07 This fourth edition of Metric Pattern Cutting for Children's Wear and Babywear remains the standard text book but has three major improvements. First, the sections have been re-organised to reflect changes in producing and marketing children's clothes. Today's popularity of easy-fitting styles and knitted fabrics means that basic 'flat' pattern cutting is used to construct the majority of children's wear and babywear and this type of cutting is therefore emphasised in this new edition. Shaped blocks and garments, cut to fit the body form, are still included, and are placed in chapters covering some school uniform garments or more expensive fashion or formal clothes. The book now clearly separates the sections useful to student beginners (Parts One, Two and Three), and also offers more advanced or specialist sections for students who wish to pursue a career in children's wear or for designers working in the different manufacturing sectors of the trade. The second change in this fourth edition is the introduction of colour coding to the sections; this makes it easier to identify specific processes in the book and enhances the illustrations. Finally, the size charts have been revised to reflect the changes in body sizing. The clear division of the boys' and girls' measurements in the charts has been in response to the way clothes are marketed and to co-ordinate with European size charts. 'Plus' charts for heavier children have also been added.

Dresses of Mormon Girls, Ages One to Twelve, in the Great Salt Lake and Utah Valleys from 1847 to 1896 Grace Joan

Kartchner 1974 This study compares remaining dresses that were worn by Mormon girls, ages one to twelve years, with dresses for girls of the same age group shown in the leading fashion magazines of the time. The review of literature indicates that little research has been done concerning dresses of Mormon girls during the first half century of settlement and colonization of the area known as Great Salt Lake and Utah Valleys. Only dresses were studied as it was felt that other clothing may not have been kept and preserved; this proved to be the case. Twenty-one dresses known to have been worn by girls ages one to twelve in the Great Salt Lake and Utah Valleys were located and documented. With the exception of one, these dresses dated from the decades beginning 1860 and 1890. Fashion magazines of the last century were researched for illustrations of dresses for girls of the same age group. One hundred and sixteen illustrations were photocopied. Eighteen general dress features were investigated and comparisons of the two groups of dresses were made on thirty-nine specific dress characteristics, including bodice style, neckline shape and position, sleeve length and shape, use of collar and skirt style. Comparisons were made with respect to the percentage occurrence of the specific dress characteristics for those decades for which sufficient data were available. Because of the inability of the author by the very nature of the study to make random selections for comparison, the statistical methods of comparison used were rank-order correlations and percentage occurrence by decades. Subjunctive comparisons of specific dress characteristics were also made. The results of the rank-order correlation of the specific dress characteristics studied showed a moderate degree of similarity between the dresses of Mormon girls and the fashion illustrations for the decades beginning 1860, 1870 and 1880, and a relatively high degree of similarity for the decade beginning 1890. The correlations were found to be + 0.46, + 0.40, + 0.39 and + 0.77 respectively. The study of percentage occurrence by decades showed a tendency toward lag in the usage in Mormon girl's dresses of some new styles shown in the fashion magazines for the decades beginning in 1880. This lag was less by the decade beginning 1890. Subjective study of the individual Mormon dresses revealed a high degree of skill in workmanship on the part of those individuals who made them, and similarities to specific dress characteristics as shown in the fashion magazines of each decade. The dresses with the highest number of similarities were those of the 1890's. The usage of specific dress characteristics explains and supports the findings of the rank-order correlations and percentage comparisons. Comparisons of individual dresses worn by Mormon girls also showed a persistent usage throughout all the decades studied of a style of dress similar to those found in the fashion magazine illustrations of the late 1650's and early 1860's. Comparisons for the decades beginning 1840, 1850 and 1870 were impossible due to the lack of or small numbers of Mormon dresses. The findings of this study would indicate that, for the decades beginning 1860, 1880 and 1890, those who constructed dresses for the Mormon girls of the Great Salt Lake and Utah Valleys had knowledge of and used some of the styles shown in the fashion magazines of the time and that this usage increased with time.

essays, and poems features dress as the structural grounding for autobiographical accounts from women's lives in Western society. Often personal in nature, these «dress stories» point unfailingly to matters of social and cultural import. Some of the dresses described inhabit the popular imagination: the little girl dress, the communion dress, the school uniform, the prom dress, the wedding dress, the little black dress, and the burial dress. Beyond the semiotic, tactile, and visual aspects of the dresses themselves, the narratives delve into what dresses reveal about fundamental aspects of human experience: identity, embodiment, relationship, and mortality. Bought or made, then worn, forgotten, remembered, re-constructed, and re-interpreted, each dress offers a new glimpse into how we construct meaning in our daily lives, and how dresses serve to reinforce or resist social structures and cultural expectations.

I Had a Favorite Dress Boni Ashburn 2011-10-01 Open up a fresh and stylish story about growing up and keeping hold of your favorite memories. As the year passes, the narrator's favorite dress goes through a series of creative changes, from dress to shirt to tank top to scarf and so on, until all that's left of it is a good memory. Assisted by her patient and crafty mama, the narrator finds that when disaster strikes her favorite things, she doesn't need to make mountains out of molehills—she “makes molehills out of mountains” instead! Structured around the days of the week, the story is also illustrated to show the passing of the seasons, a perfect complement to the themes of growing older and keeping hold (and letting go) of special mementos. Praise for I Had a Favorite Dress “A spunky story about adjusting to change with creativity and style. Tailor-made, so to speak, for the Etsy generation of DIY enthusiasts.” -Publishers Weekly “Everyone is smiling in the buoyant confections created by illustrator Julia Denos—including, it's fair to say, young readers looking at them. Endearing picture book.” -Wall Street Journal “What could have been yet another example of kindergarten consumerism instead becomes one of resourcefulness and resilience.” -New York Times “Denos's multimedia illustrations reinforce the narrator's vibrant personality and the amazing transformations of the dress while capturing the action and emotion of the story. This book is sure to capture the imaginations of would-be seamstresses; children who can't bear to part with a favorite item; and those who want to reduce, reuse, recycle.” -School Library Journal “Breezy in style, they smartly stitch each scene of alteration as the not-so-little girl sashays through the days of the week and the seasons. A charming interpretation of an old story that will speak to young

fashionistas.” –Kirkus Reviews
