Self Expression of Soul Neelkrish Osan.F 2023-05-13 If we examine the history of the last 45 to 50 years in terms of time, we come to realize that during this period, we have experienced two different and fundamentally opposite eras. Before the year 2000, progress was slow, akin to a bullock cart, and there was a significant amount of stability and balance. However, after the year 2000, specifically in the last 23 years, development in every sector has accelerated, comparable to the speed of a jet plane. It feels as though there was a distinct era before 2000, and a completely different one afterwards. In fact, the speed of time itself is not constant. In the cycle of time, its velocity constantly fluctuates, sometimes exhibiting intensity and instability, and other times showing stability and balance. Today, our world has made significant progress in every field over the past 25 years. One of the reasons for this is that our education system primarily focuses on the external aspects of human life, specifically the physical realm. Additionally, with the prevalence of social media, there has been an increase in the culture of showing off. The influence of motivational books and speakers on the minds of intelligent individuals is equally responsible. The content from these motivational seminars and podcasts has created a strong desire in the subconscious minds of individuals for success in the external world. As a result, people today possess an abundance of material possessions and equipment, yet they also experience a unique dominance of frustration, anxiety, and depression in their minds. In this era of rapid development, finding solutions to the countless questions that plague everyone's mind cannot be achieved solely through physical technical equipment filled with information. For instance, in order to send a rocket or satellite into space, it must attain a velocity greater than that of gravity to break free from its pull. Similarly, liberating the mind from its limitations and reaching an external state allows for genuine observation and resolution of every question in life. This book can be helpful for those who want to transcend the outer world and reach the higher dimensional level of consciousness. It is best suited for individuals whose inner yearning for real life has matured, those who genuinely wish to touch the mysteries of life. Despite life's experiences, there is something within them that remains unsatisfied, as if something is stuck within their consciousness. Those who are searching for the true purpose of life must read this book. It is also ideal for those who seek the real truth of life, as well as the deep. The title of this book may sound surprising to many. It aims to convey the message of a deeper dimension of existence beyond the mind and words. The language of any human mind is unable to express the secret and mysterious message of the soul of existence. Nevertheless, as a writer, I have attempted to convey the voice of the soul of existence to the readers through the medium of words. The book represents the song or message of existence itself, expressed in a mysterious way based on my own experiences. Hence, I find this title appropriate. The book is primarily written within the context of real spirituality and the profound truths of life. Its main objective is to guide the reader towards inner wisdom and an awareness of the truth of life. The author has made an attempt to unveil the profound secrets of life in order to assist the reader in their journey towards 'love' or 'meditation'. The book incorporates both poetry and prose (PROSE & VERSE), maintaining an article-oriented yet artistic structure. The writing style employs a simple and clear language as I firmly believe that language, words, writing, and communication tools of all kinds should strive to deeply and realistically connect, conveying meaning in an understandable manner. In today's age, information is readily available, and thus, rather than mere information, the pure content, purpose, and essence of life hold special importance to me. Through this book, I have endeavored to help readers rekindle their experiences of life. The book begins with an outline of the deepest questions of human life. Then, there is a discussion on how incapable the human mind is of grasping the language of words and the meaning of sentences, syllables, and the depth of life. Thereafter, this book sheds light on the correct understanding of religion. Next, it explores the nature of the mind and how the mechanical system of the mind works. Once the scientific understanding of the mind is established, the book discusses how to cooperate with the mind to enter the upper dimension of consciousness through positive use of the mind. The concept of ego is then explored. The book examines how the ego manipulates the mind throughout one's life. After providing detailed information about the ego, the book presents ways to transform the ego into a state of ultimate surrender. Following that, the book explains the real purpose of life, which is the various aspects of love. It presents love stories, love poems, and other real facts about love. Additionally, it includes fictional dialogues to illustrate the divine love of Radha-Krishna. After covering these topics, the book discusses the difference between married life and real love, highlighting nature's tremendous sexual energy and providing insights into the positive use of sexual energy. The author then provides a comprehensive understanding of the path of spiritual meditation in contrast to love. It addresses the misconceptions about meditation in the world and explores the dimension of real meditation, which transcends the mind and leads to a void state beyond or above the mind. The term "yoga" is also associated with meditation today, but there is considerable confusion due to the mixing of wrong perceptions over time. The book attempts to provide a correct explanation of yoga. The book explores the dimensions and patterns of opposite energies in meditation and love. Although they may appear completely opposite, one path represents male energy through meditation, while the other path represents female energy through love. The book explains why the opposite of yin-yang is not truly opposite. Towards the end of the book, the meaning of life is examined in relation to an unpredictable and purposeless approach. The book offers insights into this aspect. When one becomes completely immersed in meditation or love, merging with the flow of the entire energy of existence, the laws of eternity undergo radical changes. They start acting in opposite and mysterious ways. The book describes this phenomenon and provides an example of Kabir's 'Ultbansi' statements. Moreover, the book contains many unknown and mysterious contradictions. It acknowledges that it is impossible to summarize all of them briefly.

Love in Africa Jennifer Cole 2009-08-01 In recent years, scholarly interest in love has flourished. Historians have addressed the rise of romantic love and marriage in Europe and the United States, while anthropologists have explored the ways globalization has reshaped local ideas about those same topics. Yet, love in Africa has been peculiarly ignored, resulting in a serious lack of understanding about this vital element of social life—a glaring omission given the intense focus on sexuality in Africa in the wake of HIV/AIDS. Love in Africa seeks both to understand this failure to consider love and to begin to correct it. In a substantive introduction and eight essays that examine a variety of countries and range in time from the 1930s to the present, the contributors collectively argue for the importance of paying attention to the many different cultural and historical strands that constitute love in Africa. Covering such diverse topics as the reception of Bollywood movies in 1950s Zanzibar, the effects of a Mexican telenovela on young people's ideas about courtship in Niger, the models of romance promoted by South African and Kenyan magazines, and the complex relationship between love and money in Madagascar and South Africa, Love in Africa is a vivid and compelling look at love's role in African society.

Ethnicization and Identity Construction in Malaysia Frederik Holst 2012-04-27 This book is the first monograph to provide an in-depth and multifaceted study of the processes of ethnicization and identity construction in Malaysia, from the colonial period until the present. In his analysis, the author takes multiple layers of ethnicization into account and shows how these have shaped Malaysia's socio-political system and society in different ways. Moving beyond a center-focused, top-down-oriented perception of identity politics, this work highlights on the one hand the role and position of a multitude of actors - from grassroots level to mainstream politics - who contribute to the persistence of ethnicization in Malaysia in numerous ways. On the other hand, it also shows where and under which circumstances possibilities for transethnic cooperation arise. A multi-disciplinary approach, substantiated by empirical data based on qualitative and quantitative methodologies, provides a perspective that moves beyond stereotypical narrations of Malaysia as being constituted by mainly three separate, homogenous groups. At the same time, this book gives a detailed and comprehensive account of political and historical developments and constitutes a rich resource for any Malaysia-related research. While the focus of this publication lies on Malaysia, the concept of manifestations and implementations of ethnicization provides an analytical framework that can also be applied in the study of ethnicization and identity construction elsewhere in the region and beyond.

With Respect to Sex Gayatri Reddy 2010-05-15 With Respect to Sex is an intimate ethnography that offers a provocative account of sexual and social difference in India. The subjects of this study are hijras or the "third sex" of India—individuals who occupy a unique, liminal space between male and female, sacred and profane. Hijras are men who sacrifice their genitalia to a goddess in return for the power to confer fertility on newlyweds and newborn children, a ritual role they are respected for, at the same time as they are stigmatized for their ambiguous sexuality. By focusing on the hijra community, Gayatri Reddy sheds new light on Indian society and the intricate negotiations of identity across various domains of everyday life. Further, by reframing hijra identity through the local economy of respect, this ethnography highlights the complex relationships among local and global, sexual and moral, economies. This book will be regarded as the definitive work on hijras, one that will be of enormous interest to anthropologists, students of South Asian culture, and specialists in the study of gender and sexuality.

Rights at Work Michael W. McCann 1994-07-15 McCann explains how wage discrimination battles have raised public legal consciousness and helped reform activists mobilize working women in the pay equity movement over the past two decades. Rights at Work explores the political strategies in more than a dozen pay equity struggles since the late 1970s, including battles of state employees in Washington and Connecticut, as well as city employees in San Jose and Los Angeles. Relying on interviews with over 140 union and feminist activists, McCann shows that, even when the courts failed to correct wage discrimination, litigation and other forms of legal advocacy provided reformers with the legal discourse--the understanding of legal rights and their constraints--for defining and advancing their cause.
