Digital Leatherette - Steve Beard 1999

Digital Leatherette is an ethno-techno cyberpunk novel about sex, drugs and drum'n'bass. Digital Leatherette is a London science fiction novel featuring the Rave at the End of the World in Battersea Power Station, UFOs over Heathrow Airport, street riots sponsored by fashion designers, MI6 agents running their own reality cop shows, a stock market crash triggered by a star in the sky, a dangerous new drug called Starflower and barcode tattoos. A surrealist narrative consisting of text fragments pulled down from invented internet web-sites by an imaginary intelligent agent, Digital Leatherette is a Clockwork Orange for the chemical generation.

Virginia Woolf - Ira Nadel 2016-11-15

Virginia Woolf was one of the most significant literary figures of the twentieth century—a major literary stylist and a lyrical novelist whose stream-of-consciousness approach in iconic books such as Mrs Dalloway, To the Lighthouse, and Orlando would inspire generations of writers to follow. She was also one of the first to address the injustices of gender disparity and the ravages of World War I at home. Uncovering new details about Woolf's life and the places she inhabited, this engaging biography offers fresh insights into her works and legacy, focusing on the ways place and imagination intertwine in her writing. Drawing on Woolf's letters, journals, diaries, autobiographical essays, and fiction, Ira Nadel paints a portrait of the writer in situ, whether in the enclosed surroundings of Hyde Park Gate or the open and free-spirited environs of Gordon Square's Bloomsbury. He shows how Woolf's experimental style was informed by her own reading life and how her deeply sensitive understanding of history, narrative, art, and friendship were rendered in her prose. He explores the famous Bloomsbury group of intellectuals in which she was immersed as well as her relationships with fascinating figures such as Vita Sackville-West and Lady Ottoline Morrel. Nadel looks at Woolf's attitudes toward sex and marriage, analyzes her uncertain social and political views, and, finally, offers a sensitive examination of her mental instabilities and the nervous breakdowns that would plague her for most of her life, up until her suicide in 1941. A moving account of an exceptional writer who ushered in a new era of literature, this biography perfectly captures the intricate relationship between art and life.

Trans Feminist Epistemologies in the US Second Wave - Emily

Cousens 2023-08-01

Why do “second wave” and “trans feminism” rarely get considered together? Challenging the idea that trans feminism is antagonistic to, or arrived after, second wave feminism, Emily Cousens re-orientates trans epistemologies as crucial sites of second wave feminist theorising. By revisiting the contributions of trans individuals writing in underground print publications, as well as the more well-known arguments of Andrea Dworkin, this book demonstrates that valuable yet overlooked trans feminist philosophies of sex and gender were present throughout the US second wave. It argues that not only were these trans feminist epistemologies an important component of second wave feminism's knowledge production, but that this period has an unacknowledged trans feminist legacy.

Diary of Virginia Woolf: Volume 4 - Virginia Woolf 2023-06-01

With an introduction by Margo Jefferson Thursday 28 May 1931. On Whit Monday the sun blazed, making the grass semi-transparent. And space & leisure seemed to lie all about; & I said, not once in an exstasy, but frequently & soberly, This is happiness. Why should I feel now calmer, quieter than ever before? This volume of Virginia Woolf's diary has a slower pace: she is finishing The Waves and wrestling with the shape of her next novel (The Years). These years are marred by the death of many of the people in her circle, including her close friend Lytton Strachey. Woolf also reflects on the political situation in Britain, and the menacing rise of fascism abroad. The diary testifies to the sense of external threat, as well as the tension between her social and her writing life, but as she and Leonard embark on a series of foreign trips she also revels in the discovery of new places and the profound contentment of her marriage.

Virginia Woolf's Bloomsbury, Volume 1 - G. Potts 2010-02-10

This volume features new essays by eminent and emerging Woolf scholars, focusing on the aesthetics and influences of Virginia Woolf's work. Themes include eco-criticism, conceptions of intellectual women, spaces and places, and Woolf beyond Bloomsbury. The volume opens with a personal reflection by Cecil Woolf, nephew of Leonard and Virginia Woolf.

Night and Day - Virginia Woolf 2016-08-04

London, Early 20thC. Four characters; two men and two women, estranged by their social status but tightly knotted by the invisible strings of their restrained yearnings feature the storyline of this novel. More traditional in style and form than Woolf's later and more exploratory works, Night and Day, as the title implies, juxtaposes the struggles of a younger generation to disengage from the corseted legacy of the Victorian era and to find a place in the shifting tides of impending modernity. The result could have easily emerged as a hybrid between a novel of manners and a romantic comedy, but in Woolf's hands it becomes an introspective meditation on the search of identity, the fluctuating whims versus the rational expectations of human beings, of the trade-off between alienated solitude and individual freedom and a call into question of the social conventions regarding marriage and the emancipation of women. The female protagonists in Night and Day, Katharine and Mary, wish to be liberated from the imposed roles attached to their gender and, in their particular circumstances, they both ponder on the importance of having a professional career to achieve such goal, a theme that will be further developed in A Room of One's Own, and subsequently in To the Lighthouse. As a matter of fact, there is literal association between the characters' fleeting emotions and the flashing beams of a lighthouse that recurs throughout the text and bespeaks of sporadic moments of vision in which man and woman communicate from equal to equal through intuition rather than through verbal expression. Woolf's prose conquers the unconquerable. Her ability to evoke the solidness of London in all its shapes, smells and sounds is simply magisterial: the Strand shrouded in misty darkness, the smoldering warmth of Mary's fireplace, the small window of Ralph's alcove at the top of a hill with the sparkling city sprawled out underneath, the twittering of docile sparrows that delights impromptu strollers... The precision of these static images contrasts with the fluidity of the river Thames, location where Ralph and Katharine speak freely, ignoring the constraints ascribed to their sex, role or class, giving substance to silent conversations, to things left unsaid.

With Lee in Virginia - G. A. Henty 2019-07-26

George Alfred Henty (8 December 1832 - 16 November 1902) was a prolific English novelist and war correspondent. He is best known for his historical adventure stories that were popular in the late 19th century. His works include The Dragon & The Raven (1886), For The Temple (1888), Under Drake's Flag (1883) and In Freedom's Cause (1885). G. A. Henty was born in Trumpington, near Cambridge. He was a sickly child who had to spend long periods in bed. During his frequent illnesses he became an avid reader and developed a wide range of interests which he carried into adulthood. He attended Westminster School, London, and later Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, where he was a keen sportsman. He left the university early without completing his degree to volunteer for the Army Hospital Commissariat when the Crimean War began. He was sent to the Crimea and while there he witnessed the appalling conditions under which the British soldier had to fight. His letters home were filled with vivid descriptions of what he saw. His father was impressed by his letters and sent them to The Morning Advertiser newspaper which printed them. This initial writing success was a factor in Henty's later decision to accept the offer to become a special correspondent, the early name for journalists now better known as war correspondents. Henty once related in an interview how his storytelling skills grew out of tales told after dinner to his children. He wrote his first children's book, Out on the Pampas in 1868, naming the book's main characters after his children. The book was published by Griffith and Farran in November 1870 with a title page date of 1871. While most of the 122 books he wrote were for children, he also wrote adult novels, non-fiction such as The March to Magdala and Those Other Animals, short stories for the likes of The Boy's Own Paper and edited the Union Jack, a weekly boy's magazine. Henty usually researched his novels by ordering several books on the subject he was writing on from libraries, and consulting them before beginning writing. Some of his books were written about events (such as the Crimean War) that he witnessed himself; hence, these books are written with greater detail as Henty drew upon his first-hand experiences of people, places, and events. On 16 November 1902, Henty died aboard his yacht in Weymouth Harbour, Dorset, leaving unfinished his last novel, By Conduct and Courage, which was completed by his son Captain C.G. Henty. Henty is buried in Brompton Cemetery, London. (wikipedia.org)

Utopian Occupations in Early Modern English Literature - Christopher James Wallis 2019

This dissertation examines sixteenth- and seventeenth-century English representations of four spaces and their occupants: Amerindians and English settlers in colonial Virginia, country beggars and peasant farmers in England, convents and nuns, and suburban London prostitutes. These locations and their dwellers, I contend, can be interpreted as utopian because of the challenges they pose to enclosure, the process by which communal agricultural land was converted to private or individual use. In addition to analyzing depictions of this practice in works of drama, poetry, and prose, I examine how enclosure was also a set of nascent and unsettled ideologies employed to determine the social and economic worth of spaces and their occupants. This valuation, I argue, used productivity as a measure for belonging to the Commonwealth, and it marked "unprofitable" locations and populations as demanding regulation, governance, transformation, and (dis)possession. The four designated spaces and populations not only prompt critiques of enclosure and enclosure ideologies by offering alternatives for material, social, and sexual belonging that are incompatible with the thought system, but they also illustrate how notions of common or public that are regularly delegitimized under enclosure logic can (and should) remain viable. The project begins by analyzing the relationship of enclosure to two interrelated discourses: idleness and profit. Such language, I suggest, is often used to justify enclosures by tying moral virtue to economic prosperity, and in a manner that merges spaces with their occupants. The first chapter examines how the narrative that colonizing the new world would serve to cure English idleness—as illustrated in a set of pamphlets describing Virginia—needed to be artfully negotiated in depictions of a colony marketed as a potentially generative landscape where England could send its unprofitable populations. Dramatizing this paradox in its representation of Virginia's settlement, Aphra Behn's The Widow Ranter (1689) demonstrates forms of belonging that counter the enclosure logic used to rationalize the space's colonization. The second chapter explores the takeovers of English country spaces by the gentry in two pastoral dramas: Shakespeare's As You Like It (1599) and Richard Brome's A Jovial Crew (ca. 1641). Both plays, I argue, underline how the pastoral genre's conventionally romantic depictions of country life can obscure and even diminish the perniciousness of enclosure. Moving from landscapes to architectural spaces, the next chapter turns to Andrew Marvell's country house poem "Upon Appleton House" (1651) and Margaret Cavendish's play The Convent of Pleasure (1668) to examine how post-Reformation enclosure logic participated in converting convents and nuns into spaces/bodies that aligned with Protestant heterosexuality. Focusing on their play with generic form, I argue that these texts both reinforce and undermine the narrative that positions reproductive heterosexuality as the inevitable choice for securing a future. The final chapter spotlights a different kind of "nunnery" and its occupants that became targets of enclosure logic because of their perceived threat to procreative reproduction: brothels and sex workers. Examining English dramatic representations of prostitution alongside historical tracts pertaining to intermittent purges of the "stews" within London's notorious suburbs, I make the case that sex work offered alternatives to ideologies of enclosure by refusing a key feature within enclosure logic: the coalescence of commercial and moral profit.

The Age of Discretion - Virginia Duigan 2019-03-01

When the sex in Vivien Quarry's thirty-two-year marriage dwindles to nothing, her husband Geoff finally gives her a reason: 'Men are hardwired to not find older women attractive'. This unforgivable statement, uttered by a man long past his Adonis years, prompts Vivien to take drastic action. At sixty-seven, she most definitely doesn't feel 'past it', and so enlists the services of the enigmatic Martin Glover from The Discretion Agency. Under the sardonic eye of her oldest friend Jules, a world-famous operatic soprano facing the closing years of a brilliant career, Viv embarks on a series of wildly unpredictable, and sometimes hilariously cringeworthy dates - with wholly unexpected consequences. Told with great humour and heart, the accomplished Virginia Duigan delivers a provocative and profoundly relatable story that proves living is not reserved for the young. Praise for Virginia's past novels 'Highly recommended.' ABC's The Book Show 'Captivating' The Australian 'Duigan is a wonderful writer' The Sunday Telegraph

Faces in the Crowd - Leo Butler 2008-10-17

When Dave moved south to London he left behind his family, wife Joanne and mounting financial woes in favour of a playground of riches, sex and shopping. Ten years on and Joanne wants payback with interest. Faces in the Crowd is a darkly comic play that offers a unique insight into twenty-first century London and the debts we accrue in the wake of seeking out our ambitions. It is published as a programme text to accompany the world premiere at the Royal Court Theatre, running from October to November 2008.
