Post Graduate Work Claudine M. Neumann 2009 Mainstream films have been known to attend to romantic relationships from many different angles, offering the notion that even the most disparate relationship can achieve happily ever after. Employing a theory developed by Walter Fisher, the Narrative Paradigm (Fisher, 1984) and utilizing a feminist criticism framework, this study examines the representation of the Older Woman/Younger Man romantic relationship in film today. This study examines two US mainstream films: Prime and How Stella Got Her Groove Back, to show how films of older women, younger men age disparate relationships are typically unaccepted in society based on the rhetorical construction and underlying portrayal of heteronormative patriarchy. Examining the narratives in these films, it is apparent that Western culture continues to utilize hegemonic patriarchal beliefs and values as the acceptable mainstream ideology. An examination of how these films contribute to this notion will be discussed, prior research examined, and future implications explored.

Evangeline Ralph Larsen 2014-04-01 Relationships between older men and younger women are not usual perhaps or even common, but they are certainly not rare. Nor are they as subject to criticism when they do occur as is a relationship that develops between a young man and an older woman...especially a significantly older woman. Although fictionalized, "Evangeline" is based on a true story, the story of an older woman who meets a younger man, too young in fact to be consorting with any woman, let alone a woman old enough to be his mother. If a love was ever tested, it would be the love that grew between Evangeline Vandyke and Jeremiah Justin. Attraction sprang unsought between them and grew into a love that was purified by adversity - circumstantial, physical and emotional - in its infancy. When irresistible attraction comes in the door, circumspect behavior often goes out the window. This can leave disaster in its wake or it can be the beginning of a love that lasts...forever.

Cross Generational Relationships and Cinema Joel Gwynne 2020-07-21 Depictions of cross generational relationships have always been present in popular cinema. While such relationships have historically operated within the framework of heteronormativity, and have usually explored cross generational romance in the context of older men/younger women, contemporary depictions have expanded to focus also on taboo configurations of love between older women and younger men and cross generational LGBT coupledness. Contemporary depictions have sought to complicate not only heteronormativity in cross generational relationships, but also to navigate the differences between socially acceptable love and transgressive desire. This collection focuses on the changing values and attitudes of cross generational relationships and addresses the often divisive relationship between the discourses of youth and ageing in popular culture.

Buzz Hallie Lieberman 2019-03-12 In the vein of Mary Roach's Bonk, a brilliant microhistory of the sex toy that ultimately tells the story of our changing sexual mores and evolving cultural values. Once only whispered about in clandestine corners, vibrators have become just another accessory for the suburban soccer mom. But how did these once-taboo toys become so socially acceptable? The journey of the devices to the cultural mainstream is a surprisingly stimulating one. In Buzz, Hallie Lieberman traces the tale from lubricant in Ancient Greece to the very first condom in 1560 to advertisements touting devices as medical equipment in 19th-century magazines. She looks in particular from the period of major change from the 1950s through the present, when sex toys evolved from symbols of female emancipation to tools in the fight against HIV/AIDS to consumerist marital aids to today's mainstays of pop culture. The story is populated with a cast of vivid and fascinating characters including Dell Williams, founder of the first feminist sex toy store; Betty Dodson, whose workshops helped 1960s women discover vibrators; and Gosnell Duncan, a paraplegic engineer who invented the silicone dildo. And these personal dramas are all set against a backdrop of changing American attitudes toward sexuality, feminism, LGBTQ issues, and more. Both educational and titillating, Buzz will make readers think quite differently about those secret items hiding in bedside drawers across the nation.

It's a powerful, bold and provocative, and it addresses real-life issues that can sometimes confront a relationship where age and love come face to face. It's an honest look at a situation that is definitely lived but often untold because society seems to frown on older women who prefer a much younger companion. True love is not an easy find at any age, but for us middle-aged, seasoned women, keeping it is just as hard as finding it. This story is one where the readers will think they know the characters personally. It gives a bittersweet emotional depth into the struggles of a relationship between a younger man and an older woman and how the power of love doesn't always conquer all.

Romance in Post-Socialist Chinese Television Huike Wen 2020-07-13 This book is about how the representations of romantic love in television reflect the change and the dilemma of the dominant values in post-socialist Chinese mainstream culture. These values mainly center on the impact of individualism, consumerism, capitalism, and neoliberalism, often referred to as western culture, on the perception of romantic love and self-realization in China. The book focuses on how romantic love, which plays a vital role in China's ideologically highly restricted social environment by empowering people with individual choice, change, and social mobility, must struggle and compromise with the reality, specifically the values and problems emerging in a transitional China. The book also examines how the representation of romantic love celebrates ideals—individual freedom, passion, and gender equality—and promises changes based on individual diligence and talent while simultaneously obstructing the fulfillment of these ideals.

Embodying Black Experience Harvey Young 2010-07 Embodying Black Experience is an interdisciplinary work of cultural history and theory that looks at present-day effects of past experiences of the black body through the performances of various artists and athletes, including boxer Muhammad Ali, playwright Suzan-Lori Parks, and choreographer Bill T. Jones, as well as artists and photographers. Harvey Young does close readings of these performances and offers what he calls a "third space between racial essentialism and racial pluralism" by engaging with a number of critical and theoretical debates, expanding on the writings of Stuart Hall, Henry Louis Gates, and Homi Bhabha. In so doing, he also challenges the work of Paul Gilroy, while incorporating the theories of Fanon, Merleau-Ponty, Lacan, and Bourdieu. The people profiled stand up and stand tall as they employ performance (including the performance of stillness) to challenge racializing projections: Ali uses it to refuse induction into the U.S. Army. The Older Woman in Recent Fiction Zoe Brennan 2014-12-09 This critical study explores late twentieth century novels by women writers—including Doris Lessing, May Sarton and Barbara Pym—that feature female protagonists over the age of sixty. These novels' discourses on aging contrast with those largely pejorative ones that dominate Western society. They break the silence that normally surrounds the lives of the aged, and this book investigates how older female protagonists are represented in relation to areas such as sexuality, dependence and everyday life. Beginning with an investigation of popular opinions about aging and a survey of hypotheses from disciplines including gerontology, psychology and feminism, the text reviews literary critical attitudes toward fictions of aging; analyzes representations of physically dependent characters, whose anger over their failing bodies is often eased by relationships with their female friends; discusses how paradigms of female sexuality exclude the possibility of older women being sexually desirable; examines characters that live a contented life, finding a more polemical side to them than is noted in more conventional literary critiques; and analyzes the aged sleuth in classical detective fiction.
