manifesto explaining why women are still so underestimated and overlooked in today's world, but how we can also be hopeful for change' - Philippa Perry 'An impassioned, meticulously argued and optimistic call to arms for anyone who cares about creating a fairer society' - Observer _____ Imagine living in a world in which you were routinely patronised by women. Imagine having your views ignored or your expertise frequently challenged by them. Imagine people always addressing the woman you are with before you. Now imagine a world in which the reverse of this is true. The Authority Gap provides a startling perspective on the unseen bias at work in our everyday lives, to reveal the scale of the gap that still persists between men and women. Would you believe that US Supreme Court Justices are interrupted four times more often than male ones... 96% of the time by men? Or that British parents, when asked to estimate their child's IQ will place their son at 115 and their daughter at 107? Marshalling a wealth of data with precision and insight, and including interviews with pioneering women such as Baroness Hale, Mary Beard and Bernadine Evaristo, Mary Ann exposes unconscious bias in this fresh feminist take on how to address and counteract systemic sexism in ways that benefit us all. May 16-18, 1996 · Nara, Japan Despite all the successes in computer engineering, adaptive computation, bottom-up AI, and robotics, Artificial Life must not become simply a one-way bridge, borrowing biological principles to enhance our engineering efforts in the construction of life-as-it-could-be. We must ensure that we give back to biology in kind, by developing tools and methods that will be of real value in the effort to understand life-as-it-is. Artificial Life V marks a decade since Christopher Langton organized the first workshop on artificial life--a decade characterized by the exploration of new possibilities and techniques as researchers have sought to understand, through synthetic experiments, the organizing principles underlying the dynamics (usually the nonlinear dynamics) of living systems. ancient religions, from injunctions about thy neighbor's wife to the sexual obligations of marriage. It is etched in written laws that dictate who can and cannot have sex with whom. Its manifestations shape our sexual morality, evoking approving accolades or contemptuous condemnation. It produces sexual double standards that flourish even in the most sexually egalitarian cultures on earth. And although every person alive struggles with sexual conflict, most of us see only the tip of the iceberg: dating deception, a politician's unsavory grab, the slow crumbling of a once-happy marriage, a romantic breakup that turns nasty. Bad Men shows that this "battle of the sexes" is deeper and far more pervasive than anyone has recognized, revealing the hidden roots of sexual conflict -- roots that originated over deep evolutionary time -- which characterise our sexual psychology. Providing novel insights into our minds and behaviours, Bad Men presents a unifying new theory of sexual conflict and offers practical advice for men and women seeking to avoid it.

A Taste for the Beautiful Michael J. Ryan 2019-06-25 "In A Taste for the Beautiful, Michael Ryan, one of the world's leading authorities on animal behavior, tells the remarkable story of how he and other scientists have taken up where Darwin left off, transforming our understanding of sexual selection and shedding new light on animal and human behavior. Drawing on cutting-edge science, Ryan explores the key questions: Why do animals perceive certain traits as beautiful and others not? Do animals have an inherent sexual aesthetic and, if so, where is it rooted? Ryan argues that the answers lie in the brain--particularly of females, who act as biological puppeteers, spurring the development of beautiful traits in males."--Back cover

The Evolution of Sexuality Todd K. Shackelford 2014-09-12 Attraction, mating, reproduction: it is a given that as a species, human beings are concerned with sex. And whether the study compares sexual behaviors of men and women or considers the proportions between nature and nurture, most roads lead back to our distant ancestors and/or our fellow animals. The Evolution of Sexuality collects stimulating new empirical findings and theoretical concepts regarding both familiar themes and emerging areas of interest. Following earlier titles in this series, an interdisciplinary panel of contributors examines topics specific to the whys of male and female sex-related behavior, here ranging from biological bases for male same-sex attraction to the seemingly elusive purpose of the female orgasm. This vantage point between biology and psychology gives readers profound insights not just into human differences and similarities, but also Foundations of Personality P.J. Hettema 2013-11-11 Differences between people are a fascinating and long-standing area of psychological inquiry. However, previous research has largely been confined to studies at the descriptive level. This book tries to explain individual difference, rather than merely describe them. Explanations are derived from two major competing frameworks: the biological and social approaches to individuality. The book is based on the contributions of specialists from Europe and North America invited to represent the biological and social points of view. Thus, a direct confrontation is obtained of two approaches that, hitherto, have proceeded with virtually no reference to each other. Attention is paid to behavior genetics, psychophysiology and temperament, as well as to social learning, behavioral strategies and person-environment interactions. Differences and commonalities between the biological and social approaches are scrutinized and a common framework is outlined to stimulate future research. Due to its innovative character, the book is particularly relevant for investigators in the field. In addition, it may be fruitfully used in advanced graduate level courses in personality psychology.

A Woman'S Guide to the Male Mind Sam Geraldo 2011-01-14

A Womans Guide to the Male Mind is the indirect result of a blog that I wrote in 2005 How Do You Tell If a Guy Fancies You? The article was so popular, receiving more than 70 replies from women with lots more questions, that I launched my web site www.seducemen.co.uk. Since then, most of the advice Ive given in hundreds of published articles was based on my own experiences and those of my friends. To write the book, however, I adopted a more scientific approach. I performed a significant amount of research into recent discoveries by anthropologists, sociologists, psychologists and biochemists on topics ranging from basic sexual attraction to personality type and male/female communications strategies. Its my belief, therefore, that A Womans Guide to the Male Mind features the best of two worlds: common sense opinions backed by solid empirical evidence. By helping ladies understand the male point of view with regard to sex, dating and relationships; I hope to eliminate the senseless conflicts that so often erupt between lovers and would-be lovers. The Guenons: Diversity and Adaptation in African Monkeys

Mary E. Glenn 2006-04-11 It has been twelve years since a work relating to the long-tailed African monkeys known as the guenons has been published and fifteen years have passed since the last major scientific symposium was held that was solely dedicated to current research on members of this monkey group living in the wild. Since that time, new guenon species and subspecies have been discovered, previously unstudied guenon species have become the subject of long-term research projects, and knowledge of the more well-known guenon species has greatly increased. This volume presents novel information and keen insight on research previously studied and newly discovered. A wide range of topics related to guenon biology is presented, including evolution, taxonomy, biogeography, reproductive physiology, social and positional behavior, ecology, and conservation. Composed of 26 chapters compiled by 47 authors, many of whom are young investigators in their field, The Guenons: Diversity and Adaptation in African Monkeys provides a valuable resource for researchers and scientists in the fields of anthropology, primatology, zoology, and conservation biology.

FOR THE PULITZER PRIZE NAMED A BEST BOOK OF THE YEAR BY THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW, SMITHSONIAN, AND WALL STREET JOURNAL A major reimagining of how evolutionary forces work, revealing how mating preferences—what Darwin termed "the taste for the beautiful"—create the extraordinary range of ornament in the animal world. In the great halls of science, dogma holds that Darwin's theory of natural selection explains every branch on the tree of life: which species thrive, which wither away to extinction, and what features each evolves. But can adaptation by natural selection really account for everything we see in nature? Yale University ornithologist Richard Prum—reviving Darwin's own views—thinks not. Deep in tropical jungles around the world are birds with a dizzying array of appearances and mating displays: Club-winged Manakins who sing with their wings, Great Argus Pheasants who dazzle prospective mates with a four-foot-wide cone of feathers covered in golden 3D spheres, Red-capped Manakins who moonwalk. In thirty years of fieldwork, Prum has seen numerous display traits that seem disconnected from, if not outright contrary to, selection for individual survival. To explain this, he dusts off Darwin's long-neglected theory of sexual selection in which the act of choosing a mate for purely aesthetic reasons—for the mere pleasure of it—is an independent engine of evolutionary change. Mate choice can drive ornamental traits from the constraints of adaptive evolution, allowing them to grow ever more elaborate. It also sets the stakes for sexual conflict, in which the sexual autonomy of the female evolves in response to male sexual control. Most crucially, this framework provides important insights into the evolution of human sexuality, particularly the ways in which female preferences have changed male bodies, and even maleness itself, through evolutionary time. The Evolution of Beauty presents a unique scientific vision for how nature's splendor contributes to a more complete understanding of evolution and of ourselves.

The Adapted Mind Jerome H. Barkow 1995-10-19 Although researchers have long been aware that the species-typical architecture of the human mind is the product of our evolutionary history, it has only been in the last three decades that advances in such fields as evolutionary biology, cognitive psychology, and paleoanthropology have made the fact of our evolution illuminating. Converging findings from a variety of disciplines are leading to the emergence of a fundamentally new view of the human mind, and with it a new framework for the behavioral and social sciences. First, with the advent of the cognitive revolution, human nature can finally be defined precisely as the set of universal, species-typical information-processing programs that operate beneath the surface of expressed cultural variability. Second, this collection of cognitive programs evolved in the Pleistocene to solve the adaptive problems regularly faced by our hunter-gatherer ancestors--problems such as mate selection, language acquisition, cooperation, and sexual infidelity. Consequently, the traditional view of the mind as a general-purpose computer, tabula rasa, or passive recipient of culture is being replaced by the view that the mind resembles an intricate network of functionally specialized computers, each of which imposes contentful structure on human mental organization and culture. The Adapted Mind explores this new approach--evolutionary psychology--and its implications for a new view of culture.

What Women Want--What Men Want John Marshall Townsend
1998-04-23 Following the work of E. O. Wilson, Desmond Morris, and David Buss, What Women Want--What Men Want offers compelling new evidence about the real reasons behind men's and women's differing sexual psychologies and sheds new light on what men and women look for in a mate, the predicament of marriage in the modern world, the relation between sex and emotion, and many other hotly debated questions. Drawing upon 2000 questionnaires and 200 intimate interviews that show how our sexual psychologies affect everyday decisions, John Townsend argues against the prevailing ideologically correct belief that differences in sexual behavior are "culturally constructed." Townsend shows there are deep-seated desires inherited from our evolutionary past that guide our actions. In a fascinating series of experiments, men and women were asked to indicate preferences for potential mates based on their attractiveness and apparent economic status. Women overwhelmingly preferred expensively dressed men to more attractive but apparently less successful men, and men were clearly inclined to choose more attractive women regardless of their professional status. Townsend's studies also indicate that men are predisposed to value casual sex, whereas women cannot easily separate sexual relations from the need for emotional attachment and economic security. Indeed, wherever men possess sexual alternatives to marriage, and women possess economic alternatives, divorce rates will be high. In the concluding chapter, Townsend draws upon the advice of couples who have maintained their marriages over the years to suggest ways to survive our evolutionary predicament. Lucidly and accessibly written, What Women Want--What Men Want shows us why we are the way we are and brings new clarity to one of the most intractable debates of our time.

Face and Body Perception and the Physical Traits that Influence Attractiveness in Humans Shelly Marie Kemp 2012 Evolutionary theory has formed the foundation of much of the current research into human mate-choice behaviour. How attractive we find other people greatly influences our decisions as to who we choose to mate with. A number of traits have been found to influence human mate choice preferences and decisions, and most of them relate in various ways to factors that underpin attractiveness. A number of key traits have been identified that influence both perceptions of health (honest signals) and attractiveness, but relatively little is known about the relative importance of multiple traits and how they co-vary. The aim of this thesis was to combine, using one set of stimuli, the main factors that are known to influence judgements of facial and bodily attractiveness in order to examine the relative importance of each. The aim of the first study was to determine the relative contributions of the face and the body to overall attractiveness, and to identify which physical attributes most influence attractiveness judgements. To do this, more than 20 known correlates of attractiveness were quantified in both males and females and participants of both genders rated the faces and bodies of the stimuli donors. The physical traits were compared in the faces and bodies ranked highest and lowest in attractiveness to see whether attractive and unattractive people differed significantly in any physical measure. In the second part of this thesis eye-tracking technology was used to explore whether patterns of visual inspection of faces and bodies corresponded with the results of behavioural studies. For the eye-tracking component of the study, an independent set of male and female participants' visual attention was recorded while they visually inspected and then rated the images for attractiveness. Comparisons of males and females' eye movements were made in order to see where each gender directed their attention in an attractiveness rating task and to interpret these with regard to different pressures on each gender regarding mate choice. Comparisons were also made to explore whether male and female stimuli attract visual attention to different areas. In a third study, another independent group of volunteers rated the attractiveness of isolated parts of the images (regions of interest). The results from the studies highlighted the relative importance of face over body attractiveness on overall attractiveness. Important physical traits were statistically identified as predictors for female attractiveness with the most important being femininity and Body Mass Index; however the results were not so obvious for male attractiveness. Analysis of visual attention to face, body and full stimuli supported the key importance of the face in attractiveness judgments as a relatively large proportion of fixations were directed at the face. However, other than this evidence for the importance of the face, patterns of eye movements to stimuli were selective but were not directed at the specific contributors to attractiveness that were predicted. Despite differences in the importance of different regions of faces and bodies, and differences in perceived attractiveness of different parts, it was also revealed that attractiveness can be perceived accurately by viewing isolated segments of people's faces and bodies. The findings of this thesis provide support for redundant signalling theory of attractiveness whereby attractiveness is proposed to result from the chooser considering the overall quality of a potential mate by weighing up multiple traits that signal an individual's underlying quality (Moller & Pomiankowski, 1993). The results also support honest signalling theory because separate parts of faces and bodies without reference to the whole stimuli corresponded to independent ratings of attractiveness category i.e. high attractiveness people are made up of high attractiveness parts, whereas low attractiveness people have low attractiveness parts.

Both men and women who might be considered unattractive to the average person succeed in attracting and winning highly desirable mates every day, everywhere. Your own experiences may suggest many such cases. Taste and preference in love is infinite. However, there is something in certain men that acts as a magnet in attracting different women! I have two pieces of news for you: one piece of news is good and the other is even better. 1. Good men are constantly in demand. Statistics show that for every single man there are several available women. In some countries there are ten or twenty available women to every single man. In reality women have to fight to get a good man. They have serious competition to win the heart of an eligible bachelor. 2. Age is no barrier. In comparison to their female counterparts, men in their later years who are of good character are much sought after. A good man can get a woman in any age group. Unfortunately, women fade quicker than men do. Often, their looks as well as their figure-shape diminish with age. How many books have been written on how to get or seduce a woman quickly? Many hundreds I would imagine-but what a waste of time! The secret formula for a successful man in the dating world is to become that good, attractive and desirable man. So, Let's Decode this Formula. Every woman likes good qualities in a man's personality, including confidence, honesty, power, generosity, as well as being resourceful and masculine. Also a sense of humor, the ability to lead with a combination of gentleness and kindness, and the ability to love and demonstrate commitment-yes, commitment-will attract most women. Even contemporary professional or businesswomen who have focused on their careers throughout their lives want love and devotion. As evidenced in the movie Sex and the City, here is a good example of how, eventually, even "loose" women would have only one man in their lives, to be loved and be faithful to him alone. In addition, it is important to understand what a woman needs from a relationship, and what she values in a male. What qualities attract her to particular men, and what standards does she have? What does a man need to do to be delicately attuned to her ideals? One important element for any happy relationship (when a man chooses a woman) is that looks count, but his personality is what makes the woman stick around. The reality of attraction is finding out what works with different women. What draws women to a particular man and why do they choose to create a relationship with him? Another criteria for successful outcomes in dating for men is an ability to understand what qualities he is looking for in a woman when developing a relationship, and what level of commitment each party is prepared to invest in the relationship. Invest? Yes, creating a healthy relationship takes time, energy, affection, emotions, feelings and other resources. Some people fall in love many times throughout their lives. They become attracted to the opposite sex initially through appearance, but over time, they develop a loving relationship based on qualities of character and personality as well as values. Despite the fact that we all have our preferences when trying to attract the opposite sex, you have to remember, it is a male's personality and character traits that draw women like a magnet. Even money or a handsome appearance cannot help to build a good relationship with a desirable woman if the man is abusive, mean, or unfaithful. To become effective in dating, you may need to learn new behavior skills and develop a new attitude that will catch the attention of desirable women. By knowing the fundamental principles of what attracts females, you can then focus on becoming an attractive male yourself

Models Mark Manson 2017-09-11 "You can become irresistibly attractive to women without changing who you are." So says Mark Manson, superstar blogger and author of the international bestseller, *The Subtle Art of Not Giving A F*ck*, a self help book that packs a punch. Mark brings the same approach to teaching men what they need to know about attracting women. In Models he shows us how much it sucks trying to attract women using the tricks and tactics recommended by other books. Instead, he says, men need to focus on seduction as an emotional process not a physical or social one. What matters is the intention, the motivation, the authenticity. To improve your dating life you must improve your emotional life - how you feel about yourself and how you express yourself to others. Funny, irreverent and confronting, Models is a mature and honest guide on how a man can attract women by giving up the bullsh*t and becoming an honest broker. He's as painfully honest as he is outrageously funny" Huffington Post
