It may happen that a partner stops responding to expectations that have been more or less agreed upon. Events that test the couple: it may happen that the couple relationship is unable to resist in the face of highly stressful moments for one or both partners. It is needless to say that we all have to strive consciously toward mastering the skills needed to make relationships sustainable. Why are relationships becoming so hard? Why are there so many bad experiences in dating and relationships? Are people only sharing their bad dating experiences and not the good ones? Why have we become so ham-fisted at building lasting relationships? Why do people always fail despite trying too hard to love? Have we forgotten how to love? Overcoming Jealousy & Insecurity in Relationship Andrew Wiseman 2021-07-27 In a relationship, it's important to maintain open, honest communication with our partner. If we hope to have their trust and for them to have ours, we have to listen to what they say without growing defensive or rushing to judgment. This open line of communication is not about unloading our insecurities on our partner, but instead, allowing ourselves to be kind and connected, even when we feel insecure or jealous. This naturally helps our partner to do the same. The extent to which we took on self-critical attitudes as children often shapes how much our critical inner voice will affect us in our adult lives, especially in our relationships. Yet, no matter what our unique experiences may be, we all possess this inner critic to some degree. Most of us can relate to carrying around a feeling that we won't be chosen. The degree to which we believe this fear affects how threatened we will feel in a relationship. It's a basic reality that relationships go smoother when people don't get overly jealous. The more we can get a hold on our feelings of jealousy and make sense of them separate from our partner, the better off we will be. Remember, our jealousy often comes from insecurity in ourselves, a feeling like we are doomed to be deceived, hurt or rejected. Unless we deal with this feeling in ourselves, we are likely to fall victim to feelings of jealousy, distrust or insecurity in any relationship, no matter what the circumstances. IT IS GOOD YOU GET A COPY OF THIS BOOK.
