Emotional Intelligence - Fred Cremone 2015-04-16

Do you wish you had more friends? Is your love life as good as it could be? Do you wish you had a better job? Could you family relationships be better? Then you need Dr. Fred Cremone's latest work Emotional Intelligence: Develop and Apply Improved Social Skills and Take Control of Your Relationships and Your Life. You not only learn what emotional intelligence is, but how to apply it in your life to better your relationships with everyone. First, Dr. Cremone explains what emotional intelligence is. True, all of us have at least a little of this sense, but some of us have a great deal of it. These people are popular, enjoying many friendships and usually dating quite a bit. Dr. Cremone explains why this is, so we have a framework to improve our own social intelligence score. Dr. Cremone starts with an interesting but sensible premise: that we can not relate closely with others while we are consumed with our own stressors. Therefore, in order to develop social acumen, we must seek to control the stress in our lives. Interestingly, those who have delved into the subject of meditation will find some reading and exercises on practicing mindfulness as a method to increase your emotional intelligence. Dr. Cremone explains that mindfulness helps us to observe things and others closely, an important part of emotional intelligence. Then Dr. Cremone takes us into the application of emotional intelligence. This valuable sense can be applied in many situations, but foremost in relationships that need improvement, either personal or professional. In these relationships, we can closely observe all of the signals that person is sending out, so we can try to identify what they are feeling. Once we feel we can estimate what they are feeling, we can then adjust our behavior to be of help to them in their state. For example, if we sense that a friend is feeling stressed and overwhelmed, we can speak softly and slowly. We can offer to put aside what we are working on and offer to help, or even just listen while our friends vents. Dr. Cremone shows us how to apply these skills to our extended family members, which are inherently more difficult because these relatives we don't interact with as often as our immediate family members. By focusing specifically on their behaviors, we can figure out how best to respond to them in a way that builds the relationship. Professional relationships are especially tricky, because we want to stay within the lines of professionalism. Again, emotional intelligence comes to our rescue. Again, we want to focus on the clues our bosses and co-workers are giving us that help us to respond to them in the most helpful way possible. Dr. Cremone even helps us to practice our emotional intelligence in groups, and not just one-on-one. Dr. Cremone has written an insightful book on emotional intelligence that is packed with exercises and mini "assignments" to help anyone develop a deeper sensibility of how to relate to just about anyone. Limited Edition

Heart Trap - Craig Crowe 2020-09-15

Emotional or psychological coercion attempts to control another person's actions by such strategies that are not apparent to the abused or even to others. The relational coercion method requires two parties: the manipulator and the manipulator in a deception method of its own complexities. Different techniques are used in the cycle of coercion. Some are transparent, and others are too complex to test or too difficult to examine. This post discusses the issue of mental coercion and violence. Will you ever take one as a matter of course? You're going to do what you want, so no worries. You may feel all right about this, but there may be signs of the other person's dissatisfaction-whether it's your wife or child at home or relative or subordinate. You think they will not be as comfortable and polite as you wish. Another potential explanation for this is that, without being conscious of this, you have a propensity to exploit them to do or do what you want: To make them satisfy your needs. There must be no malicious intention, but some will also see what we ourselves are oblivious to in our actions. Drugmakers would like you to buy their goods and waste a lot of time and energy on figuring out ways to convince you to take a drug or two to fix something. Television ads are a particularly effective exploitation process. A poor little ball that looks like a child painted on your Screen. Then you say, "You know the weight of sadness when you're feeling weary, helpless, and depressed." Now a sweet bluebird is flying next to the ball, and a dark cloud is emerging. Next, the effects of depression, which affects over 20,000,000 Americans, are noticed. Your answer: Do you not feel sad? You that you're still tired. Before now, you didn't feel lost or nervous. But come and see, you feel helpless and nervous. There are people who are sick who need care, and if you ever feel sad, that is one of the better steps you can take to talk to your doctor. But between being depressed and being sad, there is a difference. You hear your movements, scratching, opening, or closing your name or voices, doors, or cupboards. You are getting a surge of coldness; something has just touched you. You see a flickering nebulation, a mysterious aura, a dim circle, a nose, a contour, an eye corner. What is it? What is it? Is it just your imagination, or is there a lot more? No, it's not your fancy. You are visited. Then you have to know by what and what it entails. You are not alone. You are not alone.

Imagine a relationship where you are always attracted to your woman, and she is always attracted to you. You both love spending time with each other. You never have conflicts or arguments and everything works smoothly. Your woman never burdens you, and everything you do for her feels like a joy. You are free to do whatever you want, but what you want is to become the best man you can for her and make her as happy as possible. I am not talking about the first few months of a relationship. This is a dynamic that is not only sustainable, but it actually gets better the longer you stay together. I'm experiencing such a relationship right now, and many of my male clients are seeing the same results as they do their own work. And it is possible for you to experience this with your woman too. But only if you don't let her lead.
