Strength and Morphology of Growth Cartilage Under Hormonal Influence of Puberty - Erwin Morscher 1968

Brain Storm - Rebecca M. Jordan-Young 2011-01-07

Jordan-Young has written a stunning book that demolishes most of the science associated with the dominant paradigm of the development of sex and gender identity, behavior, and orientation. The current paradigm, brain organization theory, proposes: "Because of early exposure to different sex hormones, males and females have different brains"; and these hormones also create "gay" and "straight" brains. Jordan-Young interviewed virtually every major researcher in the field and reviewed hundreds of published scientific papers. Her conclusion: "Brain organization theory is little more than an elaboration of longstanding folk tales about antagonistic male and female essences and how they connect to antagonistic male and female natures." She explains, in exquisite detail, the flaws in the underlying science, from experimental designs that make no statistical sense to "conceptually sloppy" definitions of male and female sexuality, contradictory results, and the social construction of normality. Her conclusion that the patterns we see are far more complicated than previously believed and due to a wider range of variables will shake up the research community and alter public perception.

Humoral Control of Growth And Differentiation - Joseph Lobue 2012-12-02

Humoral Control of Growth and Differentiation, Volume I: Vertebrate Regulatory Factors is a part of two-volume work that introduces the reader to humoral control of growth and differentiation in vertebrates. This volume gives emphasis on chemical messengers, which have received relatively little attention in standard treatises on endocrine physiology for a number of reasons. Organized into three parts, this book begins with the physiological significance of chaperones. This class of hormones is intimately associated with mitotic homeostasis as inhibitors of cell division. The book then looks into the aspects of blood cell formation and release, as well as the humoral control of organs and tissue growth. This volume also includes chapters discussing the humoral changes occurring in diseases of the blood and other pathologic states. The humoral factors influencing lymphocyte proliferation in culture are also explained. Moreover, this volume examines the effects of the more orthodox hormones upon skeletal growth and regeneration.

Endocrine Control of Skeletal Maturation - Z. Hochberg 2002-01-01

As a common concept 'bone age' is felt to be an expression of the biological maturity of a child. Inferring from bone maturity, the clinician can contemplate diagnostic considerations and evaluate height prediction. A radiogram of the hand and wrist may provide additional information that is not being evaluated by reading of a 'bone age'. Although it reveals only calcified elements it provides a glimpse into a whole variety of processes in bone and cartilage growth, differentiation and calcification which, in turn, are regulated by control mechanisms. Thyroid hormones, sex steroids, calcium regulating hormones are but a few of these control mechanisms, and their effect may become evident when radiograms are carefully examined. This book illustrates how to interpret the biological mechanisms of growth from hand and wrist x-rays reviewing at the same time the anatomical and histological maturation of long bones and cuboid bones. It summarizes the endocrine regulation of these maturational processes and attempts to uncover endocrine functions and malfunctions as they unfold in the radiogram. The presently used methods of skeletal maturity assessment are outlined and reiterated, while some doubts about the entire paradigm and its uncertainties are to be raised and considered. This book is an indispensable aid enabling endocrinologists, radiologists and pediatricians to understand skeletal maturity in a more meaningful way.

Development And Growth - Geoffrey Bourne
2012-12-02

The Biochemistry and Physiology of Bone, Second Edition: Volume III: Development and Growth focuses on bone development and growth, including bone repair and transplanted, the mechanisms of bone formation, and the role of hormones in bone formation and maintenance. It also explores osteogenesis in the human embryo and fetus, the internal remodeling and growth of bones, bone turnover and osteoporosis, cellular dynamics of bone, and the effects of radiation on bone.

Organized into 12 chapters, this edition begins with an overview of the biophysical principles affecting bone structure, with emphasis on the direct and indirect effects of pressure on cells and the possible mechanisms by which cell behavior is controlled by bioelectrical responses. It then discusses the periosteal and endochondral ossification of cartilage bone, internal remodeling in the young adult skeleton, structural aspects of bone growth, and radioautographic studies of bone formation. It also explains the symptoms, diagnosis, and treatment of osteoporosis; histology of osteocytic resorption; tritiated thymidine studies in bone; induction of heterotopic bone formation; requirements for cell survival in free autologous transplants; and skeletal effects of ovarian steroids. The book concludes with a chapter on the effects of radiation on tissues closely related to bone. Biochemists, cell biologists, physiologists, anatomists, orthopedists, pathologists, clinicians, biomedical engineers, graduate students, professors, and others interested in the bone development and growth will find this book highly informative.

Humoral Control of Growth And Differentiation
Regulation of Ovine Pituitary Function with

Estrogen Alone and in Combination with Progesterone - Robert Birger Osland 1969

Five experiments were conducted to study the activity of the pituitary gland in sheep as influenced by estrogen administered alone or in combination with progesterone. Particular emphasis was given to the study of gonadotropic activity. Mature wethers (experiments I, III, IV and V) or ewes (experiment II) were utilized as experimental subjects. Blood samples were drawn from the sheep before hormone treatment to provide control samples, and during and after treatment to study sequential changes of pituitary secretion. The cavernous sinus collection technique was utilized to obtain pituitary venous blood which contains assayable gonadotropic activity. The plasma obtained was pooled for each collection period of a specific experiment and administered to immature, female, hypophysectomized rats. Responses in the recipient animals were used for a determination of the qualitative and quantitative changes of the donor animal's pituitary secretion. Total gonadotropic activity was measured by weight responses of the ovarian and oviductuterine structures. FSH and ICSH activities were indicated by ovarian histological changes in the follicles and interstitial cells, respectively. Other pituitary activities were indicated by weight responses of the adrenal and thyroid glands, and by measurement of the tibial epiphyseal plate width. The first two experiments involved wethers (I) and anestrus ewes (II) which were administered 0.005 mg. of estradiol benzoate daily for 10 consecutive days. The hormonal activity of plasma from wethers was not found to be significantly affected by the estrogen treatment although a trend of inhibition seemed apparent. Assays of plasma from the anestrus ewes revealed a significant decrease in the rat oviduct-uterine weight response both during and following the 10-day estrogen treatment. Stimulation of plasma FSH activity and inhibition of plasma ICSH activity were significantly indicated after withdrawal of estrogen injections in the ewe experiment. A single injection of 0.025 mg. of estradiol benzoate was given to wethers in experiments III and IV. The bioassays indicated that such estrogen treatment caused a significant rise of plasma gonadotropic activity. The FSH activity approached being significantly increased and the ICSH activity was significantly increased, especially on the fifth and sixth days after cessation of hormone therapy. The gonadotropic activity decreased to a point comparable to the control level on the eighth and tenth day after estrogen treatment. Significantly increased plasma activity, as indicated by weight responses of the adrenal and thyroid glands, was observed after estrogen administration. A significant increase in epiphyseal plate width was observed, also indicating an increase in plasma activity after estrogen therapy. Experiment V involved wethers injected daily with 0.025 mg. of estradiol benzoate and 20 mg. of progesterone for 10 consecutive days. Significant and prolonged inhibition of pituitary secretion was clearly indicated by the bioassay. FSH and ICSH inhibition were most pronounced on the fifth and sixth days after withdrawal of treatment.
