Self-construals Moderate Women's Self-directed Responses to Sexism - Zoe Kinias 2004

Racism and Sexism - Richard L. Simms 1980

Responses to Sexism - Ouida H. Clapp 1976

Third Party Responses to Sexism - James J. Hodge 2013

Past research indicates that targets of discrimination typically do not confront the perpetrator, and that their reluctance to confront may stem from the social costs incurred from indicating that they have experienced discrimination. The current study explored whether social costs may also influence the willingness of third party observers to report and negatively evaluate the perpetrator of a discriminatory event, and whether people correctly anticipate how social costs may affect their willingness to intervene. Undergraduate participants were asked to evaluate the performance of a sexist male applicant during a hypothetical or ostensibly real job interview. Social cost was manipulated by whether the evaluations were identifiable (high cost) or anonymous (low cost).

Examining Women's Psychophysiological Responses Under Increasingly Obvious Sexism - Shelby Helwig 2022

Making Sense of Sexism - Tiffany Sau Lynn Chew 2008

Examining Responses to Sexism Using a High-impact, High-psychological Realism Lab Study - Kala J. Melchiori 2018

High-impact lab experiments that are high in psychological realism are relatively rare in the age of quick online data collection. However, there are many benefits to conducting clever in-person experiments. This "methods in action" case focuses on the experimental techniques required to create a study that mimics the real-world pressures women may face when responding to sexism. The study preparation and data collection protocol are described in detail. Needed resources, time commitment, logistical challenges, best practices, and benefits associated with this methodology are discussed throughout.

Feminism - K. G. Pothen 1995

Sexually Objectifying Sexism - Stephenie Renee Chaudoir 2006

Misogyny as Hate Crime - Irene Zempi 2021-08-26

Misogyny as Hate Crime explores the background, nature and consequences of misogyny as well as the legal framework and UK policy responses associated with misogyny as a form of hate crime. Taking an intersectional approach, the book looks at how experiences of misogyny may intersect with other forms of hate crime such as disablism, Islamophobia, antisemitism and transphobia. From the sexist and derogatory comments about women by former US President Donald Trump, to legislative changes in Chile and Peru making street harassment illegal, misogyny presents a challenge to scholars, practitioners, policy makers, and women globally. The increasing importance of the internet has seen misogyny move into these digital spaces but has also provided a platform for movements such as #MeToo and #TimesUp, highlighting the scale of sexual harassment and abuse. In 2016, Nottinghamshire Police in partnership with Nottingham Women's Centre became the first force in England and Wales to record misogyny as a hate crime. Since then other police forces have introduced similar schemes to tackle misogyny. More recently, the Law Commission of England and Wales has undertaken a review of the legislation on hate crime and in their consultation paper of proposals for reform have suggested 'adding sex or gender to the protected characteristics'. In March 2021, the Government announced that police forces in England and Wales will be required to record crimes motivated by hostility based on sex or gender from this autumn. The murder of Sarah Everard has been a 'watershed moment' in the Government's response to violence against women. Sarah Everard's kidnap and murder who went missing while walking home from a friend's flat in South London on 3 March 2021, ignited a national conversation about violence against women. Against this background, the book speaks both to the proposed reforms of the hate crime legislation around misogyny, and the broader issues around experiences of and legal responses to misogyny. It showcases the work of leading scholars in this area alongside that of activists and practitioners, whose work has been invaluable in opening up public discussion on misogynistic hate crime and encouraging wider social change. In recognising the intersections of different forms of prejudice, the book provides an innovative contribution to these 'hate debates', highlighting the complexities of creating separate strands of hate crime. Providing a comprehensive understanding of the debates around inclusion of misogyny as a form of hate crime, this ground-breaking book will be of great interest to students, scholars and activists interested in gender, hate crime, feminism, criminology, law, policing and sociology.

Women and Hostile Sexism - Jessica R. Edell 2007

This study was designed to contribute to the literature on sexist humor by attempting to establish identification with the humor target as a critical variable mediating the relationship between hostile sexism and women's amusement with sexist humor. Past research has shown a positive relationship between hostile sexism - antagonism towards women (Glick and Fiske, 1996) - and amusement with sexist humor (Ford, 2000; Greenwood & Isbell, 2002). It is possible, however, that this relationship is more complicated for women, who are both the recipient and target of the sexist joke. This study attempted to provide an explanation for why this relationship is more complicated for women by examining the potential mediating effect of dis-identification with the humor target. The findings suggest that hostile sexism is negatively related to the degree of identification with women in non-traditional gender roles (e.g., feminists), and the relationship between hostile sexism and amusement is greater for jokes targeting feminists and women as a group than for jokes targeting housewives. Dis-identification with the humor target, however, was not established as a mediating variable in the relationship between hostile sexism and amusement with sexist jokes.

Who Needs Feminism? - Richard Holloway 1991

Learning Liberation - Jane Thompson 2017-06-14

Originally published in 1983, this book not only dissects the intrinsic and oppressive sexism of conventional adult and continuing education, but also argues the case for women-centred education with a powerful and compelling logic. A challenging and controversial book of the time, mixing provocative theories with details of practice in a wide-ranging and readable debate, it addresses the process through which women's rights to educational equality can be guaranteed. Media-Ready Feminism and Everyday Sexism - Andrea L. Press 2021-03-01

Feminism can reflect the cultural moment, especially as media appropriate and use feminist messaging and agenda to various ends. Yet media can also push boundaries, exposing audiences to ideas they may not be familiar with and advancing public acceptance of concepts once considered taboo. Moreover, audiences are far from passive recipients, especially in the digital age. In Media-Ready Feminism and Everyday Sexism, Andrea L. Press and Francesca Tripodi focus on how audiences across platforms not only consume but also create meanings—sometimes quite transgressive meanings—in engaging with media content. If television shows such as Game of Thrones and Jersey Shore and dating apps such as Tinder are sites of persistent everyday sexism, then so, too, are they sites of what Press and Tripodi call "media-ready feminism." In developing a sociologically based conception of reception that encompasses media's progressive potential, as well as the processes of domestication through which audiences and users revert to more limited cultural schemas, Press and Tripodi make a vital contribution to gender and media studies, and help to illuminate the complexity of our current moment.

Feminism, Adult Education and Creative Possibility - Darlene E. Clover 2022-04-07

This book argues that feminist aesthetics as practices of adult education can inform our responses to gendered, racial, class and ecological injustices. It illustrates the critical, creative, and provocative pedagogical theorising, research, and engagement work of feminist adult educators and researchers who work in diverse community, institutional, and social movement contexts across North America and Europe. This book captures the complexity, diversity, energy, and imagination of those who theorise, decolonise, facilitate, investigate, visualize, story, and create within the politics of gender (in)justice and radical change.
