

How To Attract A Pregnant Woman

W. O. M. B. Sister Chronicles - Cheryl L. Holland 2016-11-07

The W.O.M.B. Sister Chronicles is a book collaboration about Women Overcoming Men Blues (W.O.M.B.) written by women we call W.O.M.B. Warriors, who share their real, raw, and relevant stories of triumph over toxic relationships with men. The focus is to ignite the confident and empowered woman within to approach all relationships from an empowered position. We love men, so this book is not about man-bashing. The goal is to heal the woman's heart so that she can attract and enjoy healthy relationships. When a woman has unresolved issues of hurt, rejection, abandonment, and low-self esteem, she suffers with her confidence, career, business, family, spiritual life, health and the list goes on. The goal of this book and the W.O.M.B. Sister Movement is to EMPOWER WOMEN to live confidently, happy and audaciously whether single, in a relationship or married. It doesn't matter if you are in a toxic relationship now, just getting out of one, or want to prevent getting in one for the first time or again, you'll find within these pages powerful truths from women just like you. Women who at some point in their lives accepted disrespectful behaviors in a relationship, therefore, disrespected themselves. Women who were convinced that they'd found the man of their dreams only to later find out that he was actually a nightmare. Women who are smart, intelligent and savvy but still succumbed to a toxic relationship. Women who found themselves in a cycle of bad relationships, always attracting the same man just with a different name. Women who have been hurt my men so many times that her heart became hardened. Women who decided to flip the script and hurt the men first. Women who had a good man but because of her unhealed hurt, sabotaged the relationship. Women who suffered from abandonment and rejection issues causing them to look for love and affection in all the wrong places and people. Even better though is that in this book you'll read about women who overcame and are overcoming all of these situations. What you need to know is that if they can do it, so can you! Our W.O.M.B. Warriors are leading the way: Tanya Bankston, Toni Topps, Valerie Logans, Natalie Louis, Tameca Dunning, Mia Earl, Tiffany Winchester-Ford, Dawn Ja'Net Williams, Margaret Annette Sears, Frankie Miller, Maryann Rivera-Dannert, Kristina Eaton, Natasha Marie, Michelle Roberts The visual W.O.M.B. Sister The powerful image on the cover of the pregnant woman with a man's face in her belly is the vision that was shared with visionary author and book compiler, Cheryl Holland, and symbolizes how some women carry men as if attached to her umbilical cord. The W.O.M.B. Sister is trying to feed and support a relationship even when it's toxic and killing her slowly. She needs to understand that some relationships miscarry because of the abnormalities, and some relationships need to be terminated because they are toxic and sometimes fatal.

So you want to be a medical mum? - Emma Hill 2008-02-14

In 2006 over 60% of medical graduates in the UK were female, and the number of women going to medical school as 'mature students' is steadily increasing. Some of these women will, at some point, choose to have a baby, but the question always asked is how to fit it in with a medical career? Along with the problem of finding time to actually have a baby, and coping as a pregnant doctor, there is the problem of finding information when it is most needed. This book addresses this problem, bringing a wealth of information together in one easy-to-use resource. Written by a mother, who has faced the joys and frustrations of combining medicine and being a mother, this book is a "one-stop-shop" for all mothers and mums-to-be.

Reproductive Health in Developing Countries - National Research Council 1997-07-02

Sexually transmitted diseases, unintended pregnancies, infertility, and other reproductive problems are a growing concern around the world, especially in developing countries. Reproductive Health in Developing Countries describes the magnitude of these problems and what is known about the effectiveness of interventions in the following areas: Infection-free sex. Immediate priorities for combating sexually transmitted and reproductive tract diseases are identified. Intended pregnancies and births. The panel reports on the state of family planning and ways to provide services. Healthy pregnancy and delivery. The book explores the myths and substantive socio-economic problems that underlie maternal deaths. Healthy sexuality. Such issues as sexual violence and the practice of female genital mutilation are discussed in terms of the cultural contexts in which they occur. Addressing the design and delivery of reproductive health services, this volume presents lessons learned from past programs and offers principles for deciding how to spend limited available funds. Reproductive Health in Developing Countries will be of special interest to policymakers, health care professionals, and researchers working on reproductive issues in the developing world.

Cardiovascular Disease in Pregnancy Classified After the WHO Risk-index: a Retrospective Observation of Different Anaesthetic Methods During Cesarean Sections - Maria Wittmann 2017

Cardiovascular disease in pregnancy classified after the WHO risk-index: a retrospective observation of different anaesthetic methods during cesarean sections Wittmann M., Guttenthaler V., Baumgarten G. University Hospital Bonn, Dept of Anaesthesiology & Intensive Care, Bonn, Germany Background and Objective: Heart diseases increase the risk of maternal and neonatal complications in pregnant women. The treatment of this patient group from preconceptional counseling to postnatal monitoring increasingly attract attention as growing numbers of pregnant women present with heart diseases. Methods: In this retrospective observatory monocenter study all pregnant women with heart diseases that gave birth at the University Hospital of Bonn within a timespan of ten years and their newborns were included. Maternal outcome parameters were the length of hospital stay (LOS) and an eventual postpartal stay in the intensive care unit (ICU). The APGAR score, the pH-value and the Base-Excess-value of the umbilical cord were evaluated as primary outcome parameters for the newborn. The patients were categorized according to the WHO risk index modified by Thorne (Thorne et al, 2006). The outcome parameters were analyzed in dependency to the patientsu00b4 WHO risk class and, if applied, the chosen anaesthetic method during cesarean section. Results: 65 women with 77 pregnancies were studied. Applying the Kolmogorov-Smirnov-test we found a significant relationship between the LOS and the anaesthetic method during a cesarean section ($p = 0.043$). The Kruskal-Wallis-test showed that the LOS and the WHO risk class ($p = 0.02$) were correlated significantly. For the newborns a significant relationship between the WHO risk classes of the mother and the APGAR scores after 5- and 10-minutes ($p = 0.041$ and $p = 0.017$ respectively) was observed. There was no significant influence of the chosen method of anaesthesia during a cesarean section on the pH-value of the umbilical cord or the Base Excess (BE)-value of the newborn. Conclusions: This study could confirm the results of other trials showing that cardiovascular diseases have negative effects on the outcome of mother and newborn. The modified WHO risk index seems to be an adequate tool to classify the patients with cardiac diseases and might be applicable for anaesthesiologic risk assessment. The validity of the outcome values is limited due to the small number of available patients. Due to the retrospective design of the study, a long term follow up could not be carried out. A prospective multi-center study could provide more sustainable evidence to support guideline development on peripartum anaesthetic management of women with cardiovascular disease.

Women Love Girth... the Fattest 100 Facts on the Natural - Jake Brenting 2013-01

In this book, we have hand-picked the most sophisticated, unanticipated, absorbing (if not at times crackpot!), original and musing book reviews of "The Natural: How to Effortlessly Attract the Women You Want." Don't say we didn't warn you: these reviews are known to shock with their unconventionality or intimacy. Some may be startled by their biting sincerity; others may be spellbound by their unbridled flights of fantasy. Don't buy this book if: 1. You don't have nerves of steel. 2. You expect to get pregnant in the next five minutes. 3. You've heard it all.

A Path To Pregnancy - Donna Stellhorn 2015-10-26

There are plenty of scientific and medical technologies in the world today available to a woman/couples as they seek to become pregnant. There is also a lot of science on the subject of fertility, and treating infertility. Before science, fertility drugs, and in vitro fertilization, women turned to ancient and traditional wisdom to help make their dreams of motherhood come true. Moll Flanders Illustrated - Daniel Defoe 2021-04-24

Moll's mother is a convict in Newgate Prison in London who is given a reprieve by "pleading her belly," a reference to the custom of staying the executions of pregnant criminals. Her mother is eventually transported to Colonial United States, and Moll Flanders (not her birth name, she emphasises, taking care not to reveal it) is raised from the age of three until adolescence by a kindly foster mother. Thereafter she gets attached to a household as a servant where she is loved by both sons, the elder of whom convinces her to "act like they were married" in bed. Unwilling to marry her, he persuades her to marry his younger brother. After five years of marriage, she then is widowed, leaves her children in the care of in-laws, and begins honing the skill of passing herself off as a fortuneed widow to attract a man who will marry her and provide her with security. The first time she does this, her "gentleman-tradesman" spendthrift husband goes bankrupt and flees to the Continent, leaving her on her own with his blessing to do the best she can to forget him. (They had one child together, but "it was buried.") The second time, she makes a match that leads her to Virginia Colony with a kindly man who introduces her to his mother. After three children (one dies), Moll learns that her mother-in-law is actually her biological mother, which makes her husband her half-brother. She dissolves their marriage and after continuing to live with her brother for three years, travels back to England, leaving her two children behind, and goes to live in Bath to seek a new husband. Again she returns to her con skills and develops a relationship with a man in Bath whose wife is elsewhere confined due to insanity. Their relationship is at first platonic, but eventually develops into Moll becoming something of a "kept woman" in Hammersmith, London. They have three children (one lives), but after a severe illness he repents, breaks off the arrangement, and commits to his wife. However, he assures Moll that their son will be well cared for, so she leaves yet another child behind. Moll, now 42, resorts to another beau, a bank clerk, who while still married to an adulterous wife (a "whore"), proposes to Moll after she entrusts him with her financial holdings. While waiting for the banker to divorce, Moll pretends to have a great fortune to attract another wealthy husband Lancashire, assisted by a new female acquaintance who attests to Moll's (erroneous) social standing. The ruse is successful and she marries a supposedly rich man who claims to own property in Ireland. They each quickly realise that they were both conned and manipulated by the before mentioned new acquaintance. He discharges her from the marriage, telling her nevertheless that she should inherit any money he might ever get. After enjoying each other's company for about a month, they part ways, but Moll soon discovers that she is pregnant. She gives birth and the midwife gives a tripartite scale of the costs of bearing a child, with one value level per social class. She continues to correspond with the bank clerk, hoping he will still have her. Moll leaves her newborn in the care of a countrywoman in exchange for the sum of £5 a year. Moll marries the banker, but realises "what an abominable creature I am! and how this innocent gentleman is going to be abused by me!" They live in happiness for five years before he becomes bankrupt and dies of despair, the fate of their two children left unstated.
