Guide for Parents - Elena Glozman 2020-04-17

One of the best and most important parenting books in Russia (2019) for children of all ages recommended by experts. Elena Glozman has developed EED method (Emotional Closeness Education).

Recommendations for improving quality of family life, written exercises and workouts. Illustrative examples, clear applicable tips in Elena Glozman's book will help you to create a comfortable space for all family members, where everyone can feel loved, needed, understood, listen and be heard - the space of a happy family. "A great many parents avoid admitting that they never received enough love, support and attention when they were young. They don't know themselves, are unaware of their own strong and weak points and have a hard time expressing their thoughts and emotions. Very unfortunately, in a great many families emotional closeness is lacking, and if they don't take the appropriate steps to rectify that, over time that situation will become an ongoing family story that repeats itself in every generation. This is because every person, unconsciously copies and pastes onto his loved ones - his spouse and his children - everything he experienced in his early childhood. Yet I believe that anything can be changed. In my clinic, I sometimes meet people who even in old age succeed in changing the way they perceive themselves and the way they perceive others. Their quality of life improves significantly. Those people become calmer. They learn to accept themselves as they really are - courteous or angry, irritable or friendly, with a sense of humor or impatient - and only afterwards are they able to accept and to love others. In the past I was certain that a person who longs to change himself must undergo a crisis that shakes him up, loss, or prolonged therapy. I am sorry to say that many people avoid going for psychological therapy, while the events that they have experiences are liable to have deleterious, far-reaching ramifications that make it hard for the person to cope on his own. My book provides me with a golden opportunity to transmit to you the magic of family therapy, and the positive changes that it brings, and thus to improve significantly your quality of life. All my love, Elena Glzman

unassign this number and all associated information - Jodene Lynn Smith 2012-07-30

Parenting Matters - National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine 2016-12-21

Decades of research have demonstrated that the parent-child dyad and the environment of the family—which includes all primary caregivers—are at the foundation of children's well-being and healthy development. From birth, children are learning and rely on parents and the other caregivers in their lives to protect and care for them. The impact of parents may never be greater than during the earliest years of life, when a child's brain is rapidly developing and when nearly all of her or his experiences are created and shaped by parents and the family environment. Parents help children build and refine their knowledge and skills, charting a trajectory for their health and well-being during childhood and beyond. The experience of parenting also impacts parents themselves. For instance, parenting can enrich and give focus to parents' lives; generate stress or calm; and create any number of emotions, including feelings of happiness, sadness, fulfillment, and anger. Parenting of young children today takes place in the context of significant ongoing developments. These include: a rapidly growing body of science on early childhood, increases in funding for programs and services for families, changing demographics of the U.S. population, and greater diversity of family structure. Additionally, parenting is increasingly being shaped by technology and increased access to information about parenting. Parenting Matters identifies parenting knowledge, attitudes, and practices associated with positive developmental outcomes in children ages 0-8; universal/preventive and targeted strategies used in a variety of settings that have been effective with parents of young children and that support the identified knowledge, attitudes, and practices; and barriers to and facilitators for parents' use of practices that lead to healthy child outcomes as well as their participation in effective programs and services. This report makes recommendations directed at an array of stakeholders, for promoting the wide-scale adoption of effective programs and services for parents and on areas that warrant further research to inform policy and practice. It is meant to serve as a roadmap for the future of parenting policy, research, and practice in the United States.
