Assessing Children in the Urban Community Barbara L Mercer 2015-12-22 This book illuminates the process of child psychological assessment in community psychology through discussion, theory, and case studies of collaborative, systemic treatment of children and their parents. "Assessing Children in the Urban Community" presents a semi-structured form of collaborative psychological assessment, designed to help clients gain new insights and make changes in their lives. Traditional psychological assessment focuses on diagnosis and treatment but has been slow to include contextual elements, particularly social and cultural contexts into the assessment process and psychological report. Clients receiving services in a community psychology clinic pay for their treatment through state welfare coverage. They cannot choose their providers, they cannot always determine the length and course of their mental health care, they often do not have access to transportation to begin services, to continue them, or to take advantage of follow-up recommendations. The Therapeutic Assessment model is particularly adaptable to community psychology because it allows maximum interaction in the assessment process and promotes participation and collaboration in an often dis-empowering system. This book will be relevant to clinical psychologists, community psychologists, social workers, family therapists, graduate students in psychology, social work, marriage and family therapists, and counseling programs.

A Journey of Hope Jeanie James 2015-07-30 "Jeanie James successfully captures the raw emotion, love, and courage that her family demonstrated while battling childhood cancer. This book provides a glimpse into the roller coaster of life that families are thrust into when they first hear those devastating words: "You're child has cancer". Thank you, Jeanie, for sharing your story!" —Patti Luttrell, co-founder, Children's Cancer Network "One of the best gifts I can ever receive as a nurse is to witness the transition from sad, scared, and helpless to hopeful, confident, and powerful. This book is a gift to other families that have a child battling cancer and to us, as healthcare workers. We need to understand the family and patient perspective so that we can provide the very best care to our sweet patients." —Michelle Gillard, Clinical Education Specialist, Phoenix Children's Hospital

Open-Eyed Adoption Robin Hitt, ACC, CDWF 2023-03-07 Open-Eyed Adoption presents a compassionate look at uncovering the mysteries of the adoptive parent/adoptee relationship Open-Eyed Adoption is written for the purpose of supplying a resource for those who have adopted children as well as those who are considering the possibility of doing so. Often adoptive parents are ill-prepared and uninformed as to the unique challenges that raising adopted children presents. For instance, the earlier a parent knows that an adoptee has trauma from the beginning, the better equipped they can be to adapting their parenting style vs what may have been the style of their own parents. Being unaware of this, they can be confused and discouraged as to what they are seeing and why their adopted child responds the way they do. They may even be bewildered, due to the amount of love they give, to see a different response than they expect. This book gives resource and tools to the parent for better understanding of what may be happening in the heart of their child. The information contained in Open-Eyed Adoption can also be used when parents are communicating with their adult adopted children. It encourages parents to look at parenting from different angles when it comes to the adoptee. Furthermore, Open-Eyed Adoption dispels the myth that they are all alone, takes a look at the importance of self-kindness and shows the way to get the support they need.

Shrinking and Expanding: an Autobiography of One Irish Woman's Journey Through Anorexia Róisín Delaney 2019-07-31 Once upon a time, there was a girl. Who was she? That was a difficult question to answer. When she went to the mirror each morning after waking up, the person staring back at her would be someone she didn't recognize. Flabby underarms, chubby stomach, full cheeks, thick thighs. Of course she would always compare herself to the models plastered all over town, in magazines, and in online ads. How could she not? But she paid special attention to the ones that were taped to the edge of her mirror; they were there to remind her of what perfection looked like. Society said not to compare herself to these photoshopped images, but what did society know? If society condemned these "false images" so much, then they wouldn't be a part of everyday life. After all, it didn't hurt to have a goal to achieve. Time and time again, people would tell the girl that she had nothing to worry about regarding her weight. "In fact," they would sometimes add, "you look like you could use a little more to eat." She would laugh softly and shrug off the comment. Maybe they had good intentions. It certainly didn't feel like it. Were they blind? How could they not see what she did? No, she didn't need to eat more. What she had was enough. Maybe even too much. But, people were telling her to eat more often. She didn't like to think about these people too much. Otherwise, she might revert to her old, fatter self, and that was definitely not the goal she wanted to achieve. But thinking about the people who suggested more food made her hungry, so she walked slowly to the kitchen. Breakfast might be considered the most important meal of the day, but it was not something she particularly looked forward to. It wasn't like she didn't try to eat. She would go down to the kitchen and make food-- usually something along the lines of eggs, bacon, toast, and orange juice. Delicious things, but fattening. She ended up pushing the food around on her plate to look like she had eaten something, when in reality, only a bite or two would have been taken, if there was anything eaten at all. It wasn't that the food didn't look good. She just literally didn't want to stomach it. Some mornings, she went out to eat. She found it calming to go to restaurants because other people cooked for her, and somehow, things tasted better if someone else made it for her. However, it was hard to avoid eating in a public place. People got nosy real fast. "The chef is worried that you don't like the food. Would you like something else?" The waitress would ask. "Oh, no, it's fine. I just get full pretty easily," she would respond. She would take a few bites and then stare at the food until the check came. Over time, when she would go out to eat with others, she would lie and say that she already ate, and that yes, she was pretty content with just her water. (She wasn't really, but they didn't need to know that.) Overtime, lying became second nature. Her closet was full of clothes of various sizes. Nothing seemed to fit the way it used to. Gazing down at her body again, she had no choice but to pile clothes on top of each other to hide her figure. The girl did whatever she could to avoid getting stares. She was already self-conscious enough without feeling the eyes of passers-by on her, judging every inch of her. So, she would put on baggy jeans, a baggy t-shirt, and a baggy pull-over sweatshirt. This way, the average person wouldn't tell what was underneath all the fabric. She could walk around in peace. The girl would do her chores in the morning, like going to the grocery store. Being surrounded by all the food made her hungry. Her stomach growled--it wanted everything she laid her eyes on. Bread. Ice Cream. Pizza. Oh, how she would yearn for the food. She splurged, sometimes, but normally the only things found in her basket were a few vegetables among a few other low-calorie and low-fat foods....

The Burning Boy (Penguin Award Winning Classics) Maurice Gee 2013-07-24 The Burning Boy is a vivid picture of life in a provincial town in times of disturbance and change. Certainties collapse in the face of violence. People start along strange ways, some to loss or ruin, others to unexpected happiness. The Burning Boy won the New Zealand Book Awards in 1991. 'Written with verve and economy, Maurice Gee's novel has a wealth of penetratingly observed incidents, some spectacular and dramatic, some distinctly unpleasant. Most, however, are ordinary, everyday events from which Gee builds an engaging narrative and a detailed picture of the life of the city - a city which, under different names in successive novels, he is steadily making into his equivalent of Hardy's Wessex.' - Times Literary Supplement Nisa Marjorie Shostak 2014-01-21 Married at twelve, then separated, divorced and widowed, Nisa is the mother of four children, none of whom survived. She is strong, capable of foraging on her own in one of the world's most hostile environments, not dependent on any man for her daily sustenance and ready to talk to anyone as her equal. Wise, full of humour at the absurdities of life and courageous in the face of its defeats, she is bawdy, practical and incurably romantic. She is a woman of the !Khung people who live by means of humanity's oldest survival strategy - gathering and hunting. This book is the remarkable story of Nisa's life, told in her own words to Marjorie Shostak. It is a story full of echoes from a female past that we can never know directly. But it is also Nisa's unique story, her own voice, her own dignity. In anyone's culture, she is a remarkable woman.

This book will stay with me for a long long time and definitely on my favs of 2020!' Goodreads Reviewer, 5 stars 'I will not think about it anymore. I won't think about her. My lost little sister with her beautiful smile, her chestnut-coloured eyes. My sister who I couldn't protect. If you passed Alice on the street, you couldn't help but smile. At how she holds hands with her husband, Jack, who she has been with since she was at university. At the way she admires her three boys, the centre of her universe. But if you looked very closely, you'd see how tightly she holds Jack's hand, afraid to let go. You'd see how carefully she watches her boys, scared to look away. You'd see her smile fading in a matter of seconds, and the pain she hides behind her eyes. She has told Jack that she ran away from home when she was younger - but she didn't tell him the whole story. Her husband doesn't know about the guilt she bears about her little sister she failed to save. Now, after a lifetime of fresh starts, Alice can feel her past playing catch-up. She is sure she is being watched, certain she is being followed. She may not be able to stop her secret coming out - but can she stop the world she has lovingly built collapsing in on her? V.O.I.D. Barbra JuDon 2020-09-16 The spirit of the Living God spoke to me one day and said,V.O.I.D. I remember writing it down on a post-it and putting it on my desk. Not understanding why He would give me this word the way I was instructed to write it. Beverly had so many missing pieces to her life. Like those small puzzle pieces that are the hardest to find where they fit because the puzzle is scrambled. Until it is so challenging to get the pieces to fit correctly. Beverly became sad when she was not able to recall birthdays or holidays celebrations like most kids. Who hand had she held on the first day of school? Who cared for her when her stomach hurt? Or when she felt scared of the dark? It was almost as if someone erased those memories from her mind, and she struggled to make sense of those days, even in her adulthood. The VOIDS in Beverly's life were about to turn into Victories. The VOIDS that she kept trying to fill would never be filled by her own doing. No relationship except one with the creator could fill her VOIDS. No man, child, money, job, drugs, alcohol, or sexual encounters would ever fill what God left empty for His purpose. Evie is a woman in her mid-thirties who returns to her hometown to meet with her dying father.
