Binge Drinking in the Adolescent and Young Brain - Eduardo López-Caneda 2019-03-20

Binge drinking (BD) is a highly prevalent pattern in most Western countries characterized by the intake of large amounts of alcohol in a short time followed by periods of abstinence. This abusive form of alcohol consumption is a regular practice in around a third of European and American youths. The high prevalence of BD at this age is of particular concern since adolescence and youth are in a period of special vulnerability to neurotoxic effects of alcohol, mainly due to the structural and functional changes going on in the brain throughout this key developmental stage. Evidence gathered during the last decade from animal and human studies seems to point to multiple brain anomalies associated with BD. In this Research Topic, we have collated a compendium of articles that address multiple aspects of BD during adolescence and young adulthood such as identification, prevalence, gender differences and neurocognitive anomalies associated with this excessive alcohol consumption pattern. These articles collectively highlight the breadth of current research conducted in this field but also the need to join efforts to improve the screening of the BD pattern, the characterization of its consequences as well as the translation of knowledge acquired in the laboratory into clinical practice. We remain confident that this Research Topic will contribute significantly to the understanding of BD and its consequences and will further stimulate high-quality investigation in this relatively new research field.

Sex, Power, Conflict : Evolutionary and Feminist Perspectives - Ann Arbor David M. Buss Professor of Psychology University of Michigan 1996-03-21

Sexual harassment in the workplace, date rape, and domestic violence dominate the headlines and have recently sparked scholarly debates about the nature of the sexes. Concurrently, the scientific community is conducting research in topics of sex and gender issues. Indeed, more research is being done on the topics of sexual conflict and coercion than at any other time in the history of the social sciences. Despite this attention, it is clear that these issues are being addressed from two essentially different perspectives: one is labeled "feminist", while the other, viewed as antithetical to the feminist movement, is called "evolutionary psychology", which emphasizes the history of reproductive strategies in understanding conflict between the sexes. This book brings together leading experts from both sides of the debate in order to discover how each could offer insights lacking in the other. The editors' overall goal is to show how the feminist and evolutionary approaches are complementary despite their evident differences, then provide an integration and synthesis. In fact, several of the contributors to this unique volume consider themselves advocates of both approaches. As a stimulating presentation of the dynamics of sex, power, and conflict--and a pioneering rapprochement of the diverse tendencies within the scientific community-- this book will attract a wide audience in both psychology and women's studies fields.

An Inventory of Alcohol Related Questions in the Demographic and Health Surveys and an Analysis of Alcohol Use and Unsafe Sex in Sub-Saharan Africa - Lindsay Mallick 2015

This report provides an overview of DHS survey questions related to alcohol consumption and an analysis of outcomes from these questions in DHS surveys. It first examines the questions on alcohol use and the response categories in all surveys that included questions about ever, typical, or current alcohol consumption. The inventory found that alcohol questions were included in 65 surveys in 42 developing countries between 1987 and 2014, and 19 different questions related to alcohol consumption were identified. The most common question asked if the respondent had ever drunk alcohol. Responses to this question were used to calculate the prevalence of ever-drinking in 36 surveys. Prevalence varied substantially within and across regions and between men and women. The study then uses multivariable logistic regression to examine the association between alcohol use and unsafe sex in eight countries in sub-Saharan Africa known to have high HIV prevalence. The regression analysis of the global association between self-reported drinking status and unsafe sex was not found to be significant except among men in Zambia, where the odds of engaging in unsafe sex for a current drinker were lower than for a non-drinker (opposite the expected outcome). At the event level, alcohol consumption at last sex was an inconsistent predictor of unsafe sex. For both men and women, the strongest predictor of engaging in unsafe sex was age of respondent--higher odds for those 15-24 compared with those 35 and older. For women, lifetime number of sexual partners also strongly predicted unsafe sex. The authors suggest using validated scales to assess harmful drinking.

Alcohol and Addictive Behavior - P. Clayton Rivers 1987-01-01

Alcohol and drug abuse are among the gravest and most widespread problems clinical psychologists must treat. Though the problems seem perennial, diagnosis and treatment have been steadily refined, allowing professional psychologists to assess more variables and to offer more effective help. This volume surveys the latest advances in research and therapy and reconsiders standard treatment practices. The contributors to Alcohol and Addictive Behavior, all of them established professionals, focus on such key issues as the effect of addiction on the family, the influence of genetics, and the source of alcohol and drug craving. Much of what they report is based on new and ongoing research that should have considerable influence in the future treatment of alcohol and substance abusers. The contents include: 'What Do Behavioral Scientists Know? and What Can They Do? about Alcoholism?' by Peter E. Nathan, Rutgers University; 'The Four Alcoholisms: A Developmental Account of the Etiological Process?' by Robert A. Zucker, Michigan State University; 'Antecedents and Consequences of Drinking and Drinking Patterns in Women: Patterns from a U.S. National Survey?' by Richard W. Wilsnack, University of North Dakota School of Medicine; 'Alcoholism: A Family Interaction Perspective?' by Theodore Jacob, University of Pittsburgh, Biological Markers for Alcoholism: A Vulnerability Model Conceptualization?' by Shirley Y. Hill, University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine; and 'The Motivation to Use Drugs: A Psychobiological Analysis of Urges?' by Timothy B. Baker, University of Wisconsin-Madison.

College Drinking - George W. Dowdall 2023-07-03

Drinking is recognized as one of the most important problems confronting students on campus today, with major impacts on health and safety. This book answers crucial questions about why students drink, examines its complex links to campus crime and sexual assault, and offers new insights on how to address the issue. It differs from other studies of college drinking by dispelling the myth that the problem is universal. Dowdall's research reveals that the incidence of alcohol abuse varies enormously between colleges, and in doing so identifies interventions and policies that have been effective, and those that have failed. His study is also unique in looking "upstream" at the broader cultural, organizational and social forces that shape this behavior, where most studies focus only on "downstream" behaviors, well after students have selected their college and have started drinking. Students and parents can take action to lower the risk of binge drinking by following the book's recommendations, and consulting the data it provides about alcohol violations and crime at thousands of colleges. For administrators and student affairs personnel, it both defines and illuminates the issue, and outlines effective interventions.
