The Relationship Code - David Reiss 2009-06-01
The Relationship Code is the report of a longitudinal study, conducted over a ten-year period, of the influence of family relationships and genetic factors on competence and psychopathology in adolescent development. The sample for this landmark study included 720 pairs of same-sex adolescent siblings--including twins, half siblings, and genetically unrelated siblings--and their parents. Using a clear expressive style, David Reiss and his coinvestigators identify specific mechanisms that link genetic factors and the social environment in psychological development. They propose a striking hypothesis: family relationships are crucial to the expression of genetic influences on a broad array of complex behaviors in adolescents. Moreover, this role of family relationships may be very specific: some genetic factors are linked to mother-child relationships, others to father-child relations, some to relationship warmth, while others are linked to relationship conflict or control. The specificity of these links suggests that family relationships may constitute a code for translating genetic influences into the ontogeny of behaviors, a code every bit as important for behavior as DNA-RNA.

The Relationship Between Chaotic Events and Credit Union Leadership Practices - Dr. Paul Withey 2015-06-01

Organizational crises, in modern society, requires an immediate response. Chaotic stages occur during organizational changes resulting in emotional experiences for leaders who develop intense feelings of anger, shock, and frustration. Leaders who are not prepared will be overwhelmed by the need for an aggressive response to change. The ability to solve problems successfully will increase movement of the organization through the chaos stage. Building a foundation of preparation for a leader, prior to the organizational change stage, will decrease levels of dysfunction the organization may experience. It is time for a new approach to managing organizational chaos. The research in this book provides original contributions to leadership studies by applying general systems and chaos theory to leadership behaviors in times of crisis. Chaos theory offers different perspectives that will allow leaders to develop capacities for changing their existing approaches to chaotic events. Results from the research in this study are valuable to credit union leaders, and also all business leaders, who need new models that recognize external factors influencing the sustainability of the organization.

This adaptability is one of the most effective leadership skills a leader can display (Higgs & Rowland, 2005). Introducing general systems and chaos theory into organizational leadership has become a new approach to leadership psychology and philosophy, promising to influence leadership and management theories (Bums, 2002). The significance of chaos theory for leadership studies lies in its heuristic power. If the challenges to normal events are observed through the lens of chaos theory, organizational leaders may make better-informed decisions in times of uncertainty.

The Relationship Between Stimulus-oriented Changes in Heart Rate and Detection Efficiency in a Vigilance Task - Austin W. Kibler 1968
The study was designed to assess the relationship between detection efficiency and beat-to-beat changes in heart rate around task stimuli in a vigilance task. Thirty-six subjects, instrumented for continuous recording of EKG and respiration, individually stood a 96 minute vigil. They monitored a light which flashed on (stimulus event) for 500ms. once every 6.0 seconds and were to report the occasional brighter flashes (signals). Half of the subjects (high signal density group) received 240 signals; the remaining 18 subjects (low signal density group) received but 16 signals. By urging the subjects to do their best, a motivational condition was induced in a six minute post-test. As expected, detection efficiency was higher and better sustained by the high signal density group. Detection efficiency of the low signal density group decayed appreciably over time. In the motivational post-test condition the performance of both groups improved significantly. Measures of changes in heart rate, analyzed both in terms of overall shifts in heart rate over the vigil and beat-to-beat changes in heart rate around each stimulus event, revealed: (1) The median heart rate in succeeding quarters of the vigil, did not differ significantly between the two groups. (2) Heart rate preceding a stimulus event decelerated. (3) In the post-test the significant recovery in detection efficiency was accompanied by an increase in the magnitude of stimulus-oriented cardiac deceleration and by a decrease in overall heart rate. (Author).

The Representation of the Relationship between Center and Periphery in the Contemporary Novel - Ruth Amar 2018-10-15

This collection of essays offers a comparative perspective on different forms of representation of social hybridity in contemporary novels through various cultural and linguistic lenses. It explores the various subcategories of their interdependent relationships, including power and domination between hegemony and marginality. The book revolves around five axes: namely, writing strategies and reterritorialization; marginality and intermediary spaces; revisited urban spaces; when periphery becomes center; and the modality of confrontation and construction of identity. It focuses on the identification and classification of spaces in order to understand their function in relation to the thematic strategy of the novel. Its main objective is identifying the textual representation of the challenge of center and periphery, as well as these concepts' role and significance in diegesis. Thus, new light is shed on the subject and on the contemporary novel as a whole.
