Don't Try to Understand Me, Just Love Me Sanne Claessens 2015-01-19 What if you could clarify what you truly mean? What if you're screaming inside, but no one can hear you? What if you are surrounded by lots of loving people, but still feel lonely? What if you are looking for someone to understand, when you know that no one will ever understand you? This is a story about the detection, recognition, and combating major depression and bulimia. Honest thoughts about difficult times and situations during this struggle are written from the heart. Publishing a book is a dream come true. That happened at the age of 22 with this intense story, something she had never imagined. Yet she is proud of it and is happy that it is now literally a book that she can close. She currently lives in Nijmegen, and she lives her life the way that mainly makes her happy.

Lying Down in the Ever-Falling Snow Wendy Austin 2013-08-21 First used to describe the weariness the public felt toward media portrayals of societal crises, the term compassion fatigue has been taken up by health professionals to name—along with burnout, vicarious traumatization, compassion stress, and secondary traumatic stress—the condition of caregivers who become “too tired to care.” Compassion, long seen as the foundation of ethical caring, is increasingly understood as a threat to the well-being of those who offer it. Through the lens of hermeneutic phenomenology, the authors present an insider’s perspective on compassion fatigue, its effects on the body, on the experience of time and space, and on personal and professional relationships. Accounts of health professionals, alongside examinations of poetry, images, movies, and literature, are used to explore the notions of compassion, hope, and hopelessness as they inform the meaning of caring work. The authors frame their exposé of compassion fatigue with the very Canadian metaphor of “lying down in the snow.” If suffering is imagined as ever-falling snow, then the need for training and resources for safe journeying in “winter country” becomes apparent. Recognizing the phenomenon of compassion fatigue reveals the role that health services education and the moral habitability of our healthcare environments play in supporting professionals’ ability to act compassionately and to endure.

Do You Understand Me? Sofie Koborg Brøsen 2006-07-15 Sofie Koborg Brøsen is eleven years old and, like other children of her age, goes to a mainstream school, loves reading comics and being with her family and her cat, Teddy. But Sofie is not the same as everyone else - she has autism spectrum disorder. Fed up with being misunderstood by her classmates, she has written a book about her world so others can learn to understand her, and vice versa. Sofie describes her day-to-day life in clear, unambiguous language and tells readers about things she finds difficult: being given too many instructions, disruptions to her routine, being teased, strong lights and smells and too much noise. She also tells about what she really likes - feeling accepted by other children, reading, nature, her autism camp and her cat. This fully illustrated book has already attracted much positive attention in Denmark. It is a readable insider's view of life as a child with autism attending a mainstream school and will be an invaluable resource in helping other children to understand their classmates with autism spectrum disorders. Teachers, parents, carers, support workers, children with autism spectrum disorders and their classmates will find this an entertaining, informative and attitude-changing read.

Mind Tidiness Tears Within 2020-07-24 Sometimes when the worst transpires in our relationships. We pretend everything is okay. But it is rarely not. I, for one, had a tough time understanding why everything happened to me. I mean all the effort that I put into the relationship, and then it just failed. I couldn't help except that, because I tried so very hard and as soon as I got past the winning line. Everything just broke apart piece by piece. So, I needed to understand the dynamics of what happened, so I don't make another mess like this. I mean, it was indeed a horrific time for me. Because those words that meant so much to me, once. 'I love you,' now seem to bring sorrow within. Especially when somebody you love reiterates those words with 'I don't love you anymore.' And your life partner who was supposed to stay with you forever, seem to have other agendas. I still remember those giggles of yesterday. Sometimes they even make me laugh. I mean, what I couldn't understand is that people in relationships tend to have arguments and disputes. But each time we seem to have any debate or discussion, it seemed like the finale of our relationship. I was brought to my knees and made to lose arguments; otherwise, my partner would leave me. So, I needed to understand why I acted the way I did. And how my partner obtains this kind of control over me. Sometimes when we are in love, we can't overlook small infringement of controlling behaviour. Sometimes we give in and don't realize that we are creating a big issue down the road. I remember I use to give in quite a lot to please her. From which my partner got used to getting her way. Anyway. I was looking back at other relationships, which also did not work. I have ascertained that some issues are surrounding my understanding of what is needed in a relationship. So, I needed to take myself apart piece by piece until I realized what made me tick. To my surprise, there were many different areas which were identified where things did not add up. So, I made a list of what was bothering me. And I started to work on every piece of me so I couldn't understand why I was behaving the way I was. More importantly, what my fault was for my partner to betray my trust. It has taken a long while to get this far. I have had more pain than I can bear in my life. I bought myself to the brink of suicide. I couldn't see myself living without her. She was a big part of my life. And every morning I would wake up to a panic attack, instead of a warm cuddle. It is those small gestures that hurt the most in the end. I have compiled my research into the phenomena of 'myself' and what I came across. I believe sometimes people learn from someone else who is going through a similar situation. So, I thought to write everything down because this, too, is a healing in itself. But as I was writing the way, I realized that this information could help somebody else. For that reason, I am publishing my findings and how I overcame the most significant pain in my heart in my entire life. I hope this book finds its way to people who need to heal. Especially those people that need to understand why their partner has left. Sometimes it is those small liberties that we take for granted. Which, in the end, tills up, into a massive emotional debit which we overlook? And ultimately, this pays the way for the separation of a relationship.

I Am His Obligation and Not His Choice Ms. Understanding 2014-01 Glimmer Gone The glimmer of hope that used to burn bright is dying out... I begin to feel less and less My heart is finally succumbing to my brain and realizing it's power, it's knowledge, it's truth and it's fait... Which is that it's really over... July 7, 2013 @ 2:31 am (1) Women: stop being afraid of being hurt and open your mouths and hearts. But most important, open your ears and eyes. Speak on your feelings, desires and intentions but don't forget about him and his. (2) Listen to his thoughts, feelings and actions. And though he may not say what you want of hear. Or what you feel he should say..... RESPECT IT! Why? Because its how he feels. (3) Learn to converse more and argue less. Be mindful of your language (physical and verbal) and remember not to be so defensive. Listen to his words with your ears while keeping your mouth closed. Don't half listen by putting your thoughts together while he's speaking. Really hear him and you'll gain the respect you seek. (4) See and realize that in order for there to be a "WE" you have to understand me. And understand that "HE" is not "HIM" from the past. And all of "THEM" that people speak about, put down, and/or equate to the "dog, little boy, cheater, etc." See "HIM" for the man "HE" is. woman he wants, because you will always revert back to being who you really are. Don't cut him down as you leave. Lift him up always but let him know that this isn't what either of you deserve. A friendship is a blessing. Not all couples are meant to be couples. Some are meant to be lifelong friends. And my advice applies to those relationships as well. Be blessed people. Know your worth. But know who "YOU" are first! I wrote these words for my Facebook friends but didn't live them. I forgot to imply the most important part of this blog to my own self and life. Can you tell me which it is? (6) "And if he's not the "MAN" for you.... Don't keep him around to try and change him just to say you have a man. Don't change yourself to be the woman he wants, because you will always revert back to being who you really are." I was trying to change me to honor him because I felt he deserved the woman that I was. Did he deserve me? Yes, every man deserves a woman like me. But.... BUT, if he wasn't ready to honor, cherish and love a woman like me, when he received a woman like me, then a woman like me should have left until he was ready. He kept telling me that he didn't deserve me but I was determined to make him realize that he did. Big mistake because I forgot to do what I said in line number (2) "Listen to his thoughts, feelings and actions. And though he may not say what you want of hear. Or what you feel he should say..... RESPECT IT! Why? Because its how he feels." I didn't listen and kept on begging for more..... PAIN that is. I found out I was losing my job and at the same time I was going through changes with my apartment complex. Since I had fallen behind in my rent and paid it consecutively late for 6 month they wanted to take me to court to get a right to evict if I were late again. I was sitting on the couch complaining to him about the state of my life and he said to me, "I was going to wait to tell you, but you can move in here." I was so happy. Because I had planned to talk to him about that but didn't know when and how? Everything was turning up roses for me as soon as he said that. I was so happy because I could now move back home with the man I loved and I knew it would make "HER" sick with jealousy. What better pick me up than that? And maybe, just maybe she would finally take the hint and leave? I have got to be his Choice now, right?

Being Human, Being Migrant Anne Sigfrid Grønseth 2013-10-30 Migrant experiences accentuate general aspects of the human condition. Therefore, this volume explores migrant's movements not only as geographical movements from here to there but also as movements that constitute an embodied, cognitive, and existential experience of living "in between" or on the "borderlands" between differently figured life-worlds. Focusing on memories, nostalgia, the here-and-now social experiences of daily living, and the hopes and dreams for the future, the volume demonstrates how all interact in migrants' and refugees' experience of identity and quest for well-being.
