needs/ disability in education • Illustrating some of their experienced tensions and how they deal with them • Exploring the significance of these experiences for policy and practice The book features 12 engaging case studies that are based on in-depth interviews with parents, teachers or teaching assistants and children or young people, exploring their experiences as regards their education. These accounts emphatically highlight positive models of practice as well as negative practices to avoid. In this way the book contributes to the professional learning of teachers and allied professionals. "A critical part of understanding any complex social phenomenon is to listen (really listen) to the views of the stakeholders - the children and young people, the parents and the professional educators. In this thoughtful book, Brahm Norwich, a leading scholar in the field of Disability and Special Educational Needs, faithfully presents these views through 12 insightful case studies. The stories told are direct and share the tensions, dilemmas, balances and dynamics of life. It is a very thought provoking book and an excellent addition to the field." Dr. Graeme Douglas, Professor of Disability and Special Educational Needs, University of Birmingham, UK "An invaluable book about the importance of getting to know each and every child, comprising up to date case studies that contextualise the experiences of 12 learners identified with special educational needs." Professor Lani Florian, Bell Chair of Education, University of Edinburgh, UK "In the era of person-centred planning, this book is a timely and essential key text for both general and specialist practitioners working for children and young people with special educational needs and/ or disability. The structured case study format provides accessible, comprehensive and detailed insights across a range of ages and types of educational placement. Whilst evidence from the individual experiences of children, their families and teachers are its main substance, the book also draws together case study themes, including advice directly given by parents and teachers to the readers. Professor Norwich is to be highly commended for providing this original, scholarly and useful research to the international field of special education." Professor Kevin Woods,

Professor of Educational and Child Psychology, University of Manchester, UK "In his new book of 12 case studies of children and young people with a range of special educational needs and disabilities (SEND), Brahm Norwich skilfully presents the perspectives of the young people themselves, their parents, and the teachers and teaching assistants who support them. These careful, illuminating accounts bring to life the realities, complexities, challenges - and also the positive aspects - of the young people themselves and those that care and support them. They remind us all of the importance of seeing each child as an individual. Required reading for all who work with children with SEND." Scions of Death - Marcela Carbo 2023-07-31

An ancient force threatens to devastate the world... again Feroth hails from a feared and fugitive clan, notorious for their destructive powers. Tucked away in a remote village, he harbors a fervent desire to integrate into the empire of Azhal, and to join the cause of liberation sweeping through the Dragonlands. But he is also tormented by dreams of an ashen wasteland and echoes of his clan's once-lauded past, all the while remaining ignorant of the steep toll his forebears paid for their dominion. When the might of Azhal ruthlessly persecutes those like him, Feroth embarks onto a desperate path—one that leads him into the heart of the very land his father had once abandoned. Trusting his stepmother's assurance of sanctuary, he is instead captured and enslaved by those hungering for his latent power. As the chains of servitude bind him and the shadow of his clan's notorious powers looms large, Feroth becomes an unwilling instrument of chaos and destruction. Yet, beneath the despair and subjugation, an unyielding spirit stirs. He pledges to not only reclaim his freedom but also to wrest control of his inherent power from those who seek to exploit it. His journey carves a trail across the breadth of the land, awakening him to the specters of his past and the fate hanging over his clan. For in the Deep South, in Za'al'dum, land of a thousand tombs, a new power is rising. There, they do not shy away from their gifts. There they are ready and willing to obliterate what does not fit their plan. Feroth stands at a crossroads, torn between embracing the path of destruction or harnessing his newfound knowledge as a catalyst for change. As the boundaries blur between these opposing forces, the line between salvation and ruin becomes increasingly elusive. She addresses the pervasiveness of street harassment, its effects, and the kinds of activism that can serve to counter it.
