Everybody Hurts Rebecca Williams 2018-05 Have you ever been a fan of a show that was canceled abruptly or that killed off a beloved character unexpectedly? Or perhaps it was rebooted after a long absence and now you're worried it won't be as good as the original? Anyone who has ever followed entertainment closely knows firsthand that such transitions can be jarring. Indeed, for truly loyal fans, the loss can feel very real—even throwing their own identity into question. Examining how fans respond to and cope with transitions, endings, or resurrections in everything from band breakups (R.E.M.) to show cancellations (Hannibal) to closing down popular amusement park rides, this collection brings together an eclectic mix of scholars to analyze the various ways fans respond to change. Essays explore practices such as fan discussion and creating alternative fan fictions, as well as cases where fans abandon their objects of interest completely and move on to new ones. Shedding light on how fans react, both individually and as a community, the contributors also trace the commonalities and differences present in fandoms across a range of media, and they pay close attention to the ways fandom operates across paratexts and transmedia forms including films, comics, and television. This fascinating approach promises to make an important contribution to the fields of fan, media, and cultural studies, and should appeal widely to students, scholars, and anyone else with a genuine interest in understanding why these transitions can have such a deep impact on fans' lives. Soul to Soul Joseph McKeaney 2017-06-13 This volume explores both the orthodox and spiritual facets to contemporary relationships. This psychology of the self is dealt with in lucid fashion, whilst also exploring the subject of relating to others in some detail. The issue of relationships and partners will undoubtedly form one of the more complex issues we are likely to face in our lives. As contemporary people, we are singularly unprepared for the full range of issues and hidden elements within relationships that we will ultimately encounter. The modern idea of confidence, happiness and self-empowerment is to strive to acquire wealth, status, material possessions, and this is equated with the fulfilment we are all seeking. In tandem with this, to develop a co-relationship with a partner, a bond which is both enriching and satisfying, but nowhere in the structure or content of secular life are any indications given as to how we achieve the latter i.e. how to prepare oneself and how to choose a partner who matches our own nature. In fact, this is singularly missing from our modern cultures. In ancient times, this facet of life consisted of a whole branch of arcane science = the Science of Types or Essence Types. When we reach adulthood, we only possess the vaguest idea what type of partner will fulfil our nature; the person who will be the 'ying' to our 'yang'. It is a mystery to be solved, and we blunder along in many cases, with a line of failure behind us, because we lack experience and we can only be described as immature or naive. We have no idea, in general how to measure others or even what will make us happy in this life - everything is a gamble in many respects. Our task is to educate ourselves in relation to our own intrinsic nature and also, that of others. It is only through understanding human nature and all of our contemporary weaknesses, faults, and peccadillos, that we can hope to have the necessary insights to avoid incompatible partners in life. We can save ourselves a vast amount of hardship and pain by doing a little preparatory work - in advance. This is partly the raison d'etre of this current nexus of materials. We will take a forensic look at the make-up and psychology of our contemporary relationships and just as important - the art of relating. Much is determined by communication, and communication is based predominantly on the qualities of the people in any given relationship - this is a universal rule.

Marshall draws on thirty plus years working with over three thousand clients to give you his tried and test tool kit for a happy marriage. and pitfalls that stop relationships and marriages before they start. She also offers advice on how to wake up and shake up a relationship.

When a WoMan is Fedup Ralston O'Connor 2010-05 According to a female friend of mine "show me a woman in her early 40's or younger who has never been married, and says that she does not want to get married and I will show you a liar." Unfortunately many of these women are in what they think are dead end relationships. These women are characterized as bitter and angry because of their relationship situations. This book will give you some insight into the habits you develop, things you do, and attitude that you portray that will only give the man in your life a serious moment of pause when the discussion of marriage arises. Admittedly the issues presented are from a decidedly male point of view, but the author believes that it was important that women got a clear idea into how the male mind works.

Ten Stupid Things Couples Do to Mess Up Their Relationships Laura Schlessinger 2001-12-24 Have you ever withheld information from your spouse or partner for fear of rejection? Do you feel that your own needs come before your relationship? Do you continue to cling to past relationships, even at the expense of your current one? Do you put your work first, even if it means you never see your family? Are you in a destructive relationship? If you answered yes to any of these questions, then Dr. Laura has some hard truths for you to face. Dr. Laura Schlessinger is an expert on the stupid things men and women do to sabotage themselves and their happiness. In her earlier bestsellers, Ten Stupid Things Women Do to Mess Up Their Lives and Ten Stupid Things Men Do to Mess Up Their Lives, she urged her readers to take responsibility for their actions and to respect themselves and the people in their lives. Now the popular radio talk-show host tackles another difficult, complicated issue: the ways in which women and men hurt themselves and one another in their romantic relationships. Using real-life situations from her radio call-in show and from listeners' letters, Dr. Laura offers firm yet compassionate advice on how to find greater happiness in life and in love. She urges couples to set their priorities straight, learn the difference between privacy and secrecy, stop making stupid excuses for their mistakes, and face their responsibilities to each other and to their families. Too often individuals in relationships ask only what the relationship can do for them, not what they can do for the relationship. Too many people are jumping into intimate relationships before taking the time to get to know each other. In Ten Stupid Things Couples Do to Mess Up Their Relationships, Dr. Laura calls for a return to traditional courtship. Courtship allows couples and their families to get acquainted with one another over a longer period of time and provides structure and guidelines for that important process. She asks couples to take a long, hard look at the recurring problems in their marriages -- both small and large -- and doesn't hesitate to tell them what they are doing wrong and how they can fix them. This is an invaluable guide for all married couples -- newlyweds and grandparents alike -- and for single people who are struggling to find the right mate or to escape a bad relationship. Acknowledging your stupid mistakes can be difficult, but with the help of this book you will learn how to correct them and how to find fulfillment, joy, and loving companionship in your most important relationship.

Representations of Black Women in the Media Marquita Marie Gammage 2015-10-16 In 1920 W.E.B. Du Bois cited the damnation of women as linked to the devaluation of motherhood. This dilemma, he argues, had a crushing blow on Black women as they were forced into slavery. Black womanhood, portrayed as hypersexual by nature, became an enduring stereotype which did not coincide with the dignity of mother and wife. This portrayal continues to reinforce negative stereotypes of Black women in the media today. This book highlights how Black women have been negatively portrayed in the media, focusing on the export nature of media and its ability to convey notions of Blackness to the public. It argues that media such as rap music videos, television dramas, reality television shows, and newscasts create and affect expectations of Black women. Exploring the role that racism, misogyny and media play in the representation of Black womanhood, it provides a foundation for challenging contemporary media's portrayal of Black women.

Keigo in Modern Japan Patricia J. Wetzel 2004-01-31 Patricia Wetzel offers in this volume a comprehensive examination of a frequently discussed yet much misunderstood aspect of the Japanese language. Keigo, or "polite language," is often viewed as a quaint accessory to Japanese grammar and a relic of Japan's feudal past. Nothing, Wetzel contends, could be further from the truth. It is true that Japan has a long history of differentiating linguistic form on the basis of social status, psychological detachment, emotional reserve, and a host of other context-dependent factors. But, as is made clear in this unique and broadly framed study, modern keigo consciousness and keigo grammar emerged out of Japan's encounter with Western intellectual trends in the mid- to late nineteenth century. Keigo in Modern Japan presents a finely nuanced linguistic and political review of keigo available nowhere else in English. The first chapter outlines the ways in which keigo has been problematized in Western linguistics through the application of structuralist analysis and its offshoots. But keigo's presence in the English-language literature does not begin to compare with the place it occupies in the Japanese linguistic canon. Wetzel describes the historical roots and growth of keigo and the popularity of how-to manuals, which, she contends, are less about overt instruction than reinforcing what people already believe.

Close Relationship Loss Terri L. Orbuch 2012-12-06 Social scientists from various disciplines have been increasingly concerned with the nature, structure, and function of close relationships. Although most of the early work on the topic of close relationships drew attention to the development of close relationships, since the mid-1970s researchers have begun to investigate the many different aspects connected to the loss of close relationships. Despite the change to a more comprehensive conceptual framework, close relationship research is often criticized for being atheoretical; the research is criticized for being purely descriptive in nature and thus lacking a more theoretical framework.

Contrary to this belief, I wish to argue that researchers in the area of close relationship loss employ several critical and prominent theoretical perspectives to describe, explain, and understand the endings of relationships—thus, the fruition of this book. The major aim of this edited book is to present and illuminate, within one volume, some of these major theoretical perspectives. The volume as a whole has several unique qualities. First, within each chapter, the authors provide a general overview of the theoretical perspective or approach within which they examine close relationship loss.

Kiss and Makeup Shanequa R. Nelson 2013-02-27 "I love makeup. I would never buy it and not wear it. And one day as I was praying and spending time with God He gave me an amazing word to meditate on. He said "If you wouldn't buy makeup and not wear it, why have a bible and never wear it? Makeup is meant to be applied and so is the Word of God." God doesn't just want us to read His Word, but to read it, study it, and apply it to our lives daily. He wants people to see His Word applied and written all over us." What products (attitudes, thoughts, and actions) does your life consist of? Are you applying products that reflect God or the world? As women of God our faces (spirits) should be made up of the things of God and not the world. In the society we live in today we are told that outward beauty is more important than inward beauty, but God cares about your heart. God doesn't care about how much makeup you apply to your face, but if you're allowing Him to make you up on the inside. "We make up our faces physically, but it is God who makes up our faces spiritually." God doesn't just want us applying makeup to our faces, but applying His Word every day. Getting Played Mohosho Pofane 2021-01-04 Bob Marley once said the biggest coward is a man who awakens a woman's love with no intention of marrying her. But what about a woman who awakens a man's love we with intentions of marrying him? Well, that's a topic for another book! Love is a beautiful thing. It's a risk that most of us take over and over again with the hope of finding the perfect partner whom we're willing to spend the rest of our lives with. Someone who will make the love journey worthwhile. While we're searching, we end up in toxic situations, being played or ghosted, as a result end up looking at the whole notion of love differently. Some people give in to the cruelty and play the game too, while others keep hoping for a good partner on try over and over again. It's often said that the world does not reward those who play by the rules (which is arguably true), so wouldn't it be great if we knew the difference between people who come to us to play and those who come with genuinely good intentions? We all know the feeling of being played in dating. You were misled by someone who seemed to be into you. There were no warning signs that someone was about to flip the script but just as you were letting your guard down and starting to get excited about the promise of a long term relationship, the person you were dating totally flakes. They pull away. They dump you. They ghost. At the end of the day leaving you feeling like a fool for believing in something that clearly was not real. So how can we avoid getting played or made to feel like a fool in dating? First understand what it means when someone plays you. Essentially they have tricked you into giving up something that you would normally never give up unless you were guaranteed to get something in turn. This could be sexy time, money, time, or intimacy. But a player makes you believe in the promise of a return on your investment. They make you feel like you can trust them, when in fact they are completely untrustworthy. Thing is, most girls secretly wish they had a male best friend. One who would tell them all about boys, their conversations, their daily plans about women, everything. However, those are rare to find because under normal circumstances, your male best friend is only hanging around because he's patiently hoping that one day you'll give in and he'll hit it. That's if the two of you haven't made that 'mistake' already. It's through our friends of opposite the sex that we get the kind of information contained in this book. Although most content in this book is more oriented to the females: take this book as your companion who is not patiently waiting to sleep with you. After all, it is the ultimate guide to a healthy relationship. All I'm saying is, we need to start treating others like we'd want them to treat us. We need to have compassion and respect for the feelings of others. When I wrote this book, I thought of all the people who are going to fall victims to someone who behaves the way my friends and I did long ago. I thought to myself, "what if it's my own daughter?", what if it's my nephew or someone I love?" Then I decided that since I may not be there to guide them or give them a little pep talk about men, I might as well write a book, something they can keep referring to every time things get out of control. I'm not saying the book will completely help, but it's always good to know the truth, the decision is always yours! Enjoy The Truth about Breaking Up, Making Up, and Moving on Chad Eastham 2013 Relationships are like road trips. Sometimes they're an exciting adventure. But sometimes they're like a traffic jam going nowhere. Or even worse, they're a wrong turn that's taken you hundreds of miles off your course. With much-needed humor and honest advice, bestselling author and speaker Chad Eastham helps you think through tough but necessary relationship issues such as: · Why some people find happiness, while others find heartache · Why pain hurts so much · When to break up · When to make up Chad's conversational tone, facts, and advice encourage young people to rethink life's conversations, even the difficult stuff like heartbreak. There is nothing in life that is too big, too painful, or too difficult that God cannot make better and use to teach us about love. Nothing.
