A first-time examination of sexual anorexia, an extreme fear of sexual intimacy and obsessive avoidance of sex, by the acknowledged leader in the treatment of compulsive sexual behavior and recovery. Utilizing extensive research and elucidating case studies, Carnes develops concrete tasks and plans for restoring nurturing and sensuality, building fulfilling relationships, exploring intimacy, and creating healthy sexuality. Confessional Politics Irene Gammel 1999 The premise of Confessional Politics is that in this confessional age, "telling all is in." From a unique variety of perspectives and angles, the essays in this collection explore the association of confession with femininity; they examine its function as a gender-specific discourse as they probe its many feminized genres and subgenres. Confessional Politics investigates the creative and strategic ways in which women shape the telling of their sexual stories in order to resist and negotiate the confessional practices designed to position them in conventional sexual frameworks. Investigating the confessional politics of traditional forms of social life writing (including erotic diaries, journals, letters, and confessional fiction), this book significantly expands its focus beyond conventional forms to include practices affecting mass readerships and audiences. The collection addresses provocative general topics: talk shows, sexual harassment, sexual abuse, sexuality, self-help books, and cross-dressing, as well as expressive works such as contemporary Canadian women's poetry, lesbian fiction, performance art, Anne Frank's recently released complete diary, and memoirs.

Relating to Queer Theory Sarah Cooper 2000 Can queer theory be written by theorists of any sexual identity? Does the act of reading queer theory form queer readers who do not necessarily claim lesbian, gay, or queer identity? In Relating to Queer Theory the author explores the intimate link between sexual identity and theoretical stance in the energizing work of leading contemporary queer theorists. Drawing on a wide range of poststructuralist theory, this study theorizes previously unarticulated ethical relations between queer theory and readers of different sexual identities. Arguing that (queer) reading takes place in a transformative space that is open to readers of any sexual identity, this book interweaves theory and practice of queer reading by staging a series of encounters between queer theory and the different but related field of French feminism. Texts by Irigaray, Kristeva, Wittig, and Cixous are placed alongside those of their queer theoretical commentators in order to re-view current relations between feminism and queer theory. This study reflects critically on intersecting and divergent positions in feminist theory and queer theory, using each theoretical area to reread the other on issues of sexuality, sexual difference, and gender in relation to reading and writing.

Exploring the Sexual Self-schemas of Adult Female Survivors of Childhood Incest Cynthia M. Baker 2015 Childhood sexual abuse (CSA) is a debilitating crime resulting in significant consequences to a survivor's mind, body, and spirit. Although there is much awareness of, and a plethora of research regarding the sequelae of CSA for survivors, there is nonetheless a scarcity of research focusing on how this population constructs their sexual self-schemas and self-concepts, and subsequently, how they see themselves as a sexual being in adulthood. Whereas there is some explanation of sexual self-schemas for survivors of CSA, most of this research combines survivors of extrafamilial and intrafamilial (i.e., incest) CSA into one sexually abused group, typically comparing the findings with persons who have not experienced sexual abuse. This creates difficulty in determining the experiences of different types of survivors. For these reasons, the mental health community is limited in awareness of how to best assist survivors of incest who struggle with developing healthy sexual views of self and identity.

Let's Talk about Lgbtq+ Sex Mackenzie Myer 2023 Sexual self-esteem and sexual satisfaction are two important, yet understudied constructs related to sexual well-being. The bulk of existing literature in this area focuses on heterosexual individuals and thus does not capture the sexual well-being of sexuality minorities. The present study surveyed LGBTQ+ emerging adults between the ages of 18 and 25 (n= 208) about their sexual self-esteem and sexual satisfaction as well as four distinct sources of sex information: institutional, parent, peer, and media. Regression analyses found that there was a significant relationship between the two sexual well-being constructs. These results demonstrate that LGBTQ+ individuals with lower levels of sexual self-esteem may experience lower levels of sexual satisfaction and vice versa. Additionally, results indicated that sample members learned the most about various sex and sexuality topics from peer and media sources. This finding illuminates existing media research which suggests that LGBTQ+ emerging adults learn a great deal about sex and sexuality topics when they confide in their peers and seek out LGBTQ+ media products. By focusing on members of the LGBTQ+ community, this thesis offers new insights about the sexual well-being of this sexuality minority group.

Finding Male Sexuality MR Carl E Stevens Jr 2013-06-05 Men today are at a sexual and relationship crossroads. The choice is to continue to live your relationship and sexual life according to the standard narrative of relating, which is an extension of the patriarchal and troubadour-based romanticism or to acknowledge how we really feel and move towards our sexual and relationship potential. The choice is to take a stand in saving our families, children, and communities or to continue contributing to a system and mode of behavior that spirals us downward toward moral ruin. This book is about selected parts of my personal journey to expand my sexual awareness. It's about how my socially accepted expectations of male sexuality prevented me from having completely fulfilling sexual experiences for much of my adult life and how these same expectations prevented me from understanding the women I interacted with. After being introduced to the art of tantra and sacred sexuality, I found myself being opened to deeper and deeper encounters with my lovers. These deep encounters became lessons that I would incorporate into my sexual and relationship life going forward.

The Relationship Between Childhood Sexual Abuse and Dimensions of the Sexual Self-view

Stephenie Davies 1998

I Confess! Thomas Waugh 2019-11-21 In the postwar decades, sexual revolutions – first women's suffrage, flappers, Prohibition, and Mae West; later Alfred Kinsey, Hugh Hefner, and the pill – altered the lifestyles and desires of generations. Since the 1990s, the internet and its cataclysmic cultural and social technological shifts have unleashed a third sexual revolution, crystallized in the acts and rituals of confession that are a staple of our twenty-first-century lives. In I Confess!, a collection of thirty original essays, leading international scholars such as Ken Plummer, Susanna Paasonen, Tom Roach, and Shohini Ghosh explore the ideas of confession and sexuality in moving image arts and media, mostly in the Global North, over the last quarter century. Through self-referencing or autobiographical stories, testimonies, and performances, and through rigorously scrutinized case studies of "gay for pay," gaming, camming, YouTube uploads, and the films Tarnation and *Nymph()*maniac, the contributors describe a spectrum of identities, desires, and related representational practices. Together these desires and practices shape how we see, construct, and live our identities within this third sexual revolution, embodying both its ominous implications of surveillance and control and its utopian glimmers of community and liberation. Inspired by theorists from Michel Foucault and Gilles Deleuze to Gayle Rubin and José Esteban Muñoz, I Confess! reflects an extraordinary, paradigm-shifting proliferation of first-person voices and imagery produced during the third sexual revolution, from the eve of the internet to today.

the effects of puberty and teenage sexuality on adolescents. By analyzing interviews with 55 teenagers, Karin Martin finds that girls' self-esteem drops significantly more than boys' does at adolescence. While this finding is supported by previous studies, Martin picks up where these earlier studies leave off by focusing on girls' development and considering different experiences of puberty and sex as an explanation for girls' greater drop in self-esteem. Puberty, Sexuality and the Self examines voice change, breast development, shaving, expectations of sex, the decision to have sex, experiences of sex and how boys and girls manage their emotions and selves throughout all of these new experiences. Comparing boys and girls at adolescence, Martin takes a qualitative look at puberty and sexuality, supporting her theory in the words of the adolescents themselves.

The Human Ground Stanley Keleman 1975

Women's Perceptions of Their Sexual Self-concept After Becoming Mothers Melanie Ho 2017 Using the transcendental phenomenological research model, women's perceptions of their sexual self-concept after becoming mothers was investigated. A review of the literature revealed a dearth of studies on sexual self-concept in motherhood. Overall, a review of the current research revealed four main areas of relevance: sexual self-concept development and theory, the psychology of women's sexuality, sexuality in motherhood, and motherhood and body image. Phenomenological reduction analysis of interviews with 12 participants revealed textural themes including: a "new normal" often defines postpartum sex lives, body dissatisfaction after pregnancy and birth, societal perceptions of motherhood and societal pressures on mothers, breastfeeding and breast changes, becoming more connected to physical and sexual selves after pregnancy and birth, and women's partners are now more attracted to them after they have become mothers. Through the imaginative or eidetic variation, a structural description of the phenomenon was created using the universal structures of temporality, spatiality, materiality, causality, body-hood, relationship to self, and relationship to others. The final synthesis revealed that women's perceptions of their sexual self-concept after becoming mothers may be described as a complex process that is comprised of many different experiences that impact how a woman feels about herself as a sexual being. This study deepens understanding of how birthing a child informs women's sexual self-concept and highlights the need
