LEADERSHIP - Dr. Makarand Upadhyaya 2020-12-21

Leaders in every field are making the world a better place to live. People with strong faith in themselves have the ability to make the change. Even though there are 18 types of leadership behaviours, every leader has a core aim to complete their vision. The leadership style of a person depends on the field of work, followers, circumstances, and, of course, the changing world. Technology, lifestyle, and needs of the world drastically change every year. Hence, the path towards the goal might also upgrade. Staying productive and positive in a changing environment should be your mission to be a good leader. Half of the 18 leadership styles swing towards people-oriented characteristics and the remaining half has process-oriented traits. While some leaders prefer to be open and inviting, the other leaders believe in dedicated rules. It depends on you and how you want to make changes in the world. Find your leadership style, learn new things, and make your ideas worth sharing with the world. Stories of 18 popular leaders in this book make one thing certain, you can teach yourself to be a leader. To go somewhere, you have to start first. The world needs more amazing leaders. Leaders can even make impossible things happen with their charm and focus. The world also needs more followers. Followers work hard to prove themselves. Some of these followers develop the potential to become a future leader. You could be the new leader, but first, you have to have a strong mission, vision, and trust in your abilities. Leaders and followers together are the backbone of the developing world.

Social Entrepreneurship as a Catalyst for Social Change - Charles Wankel 2013-08-01

Social Entrepreneurship as a Catalyst for Social Change contains twenty chapters on the impact of social entrepreneurial ventures within a variety of cultural and national contexts. From Brazil to Croatia, from Thailand to Greenland, this book is rare in that it provides a rich landscape in which to imagine additional efforts to bring about positive social change. The case studies cover a broad range of topics with one common theme—how can we learn from what others are doing in the emerging field of social entrepreneurship? The various cases will inspire budding entrepreneurs to new heights of awareness to support the alleviation of poverty in many contexts. Part Two, Lessons from the Field: How Social Entrepreneurial Companies are Succeeding, discusses the similarities and differences that social entrepreneurial ventures and other businesses must face to be successful. Other topics covered include Entrepreneur Bootcamp for Veterans, microfinance, social entrepreneurship education, and development of a culture of social entrepreneurship. Part Three, Going from Local to Global, explores the challenges of a social enterprise as it transitions from a national venture to an international one. The relationship between social entrepreneurship and local business development in places such as Sicily is discussed through case studies. A stage theory of social venture internationalization is put forth. Research connecting social media and social entrepreneurship is used to illustrate the importance of social networks in creating positive social change. Part four, Challenges in Social Entrepreneurship, explores the challenges that social entrepreneurial ventures face. Ethics of intellectual property rights in social enterprises is a focal topic in this section. Social franchising as an approach to social entrepreneurship is illustrated.

The future engagement of young citizens from a wide range of socio-economic, ethnic and cultural backgrounds in democratic politics remains a crucial concern for academics, policy-makers, civics teachers and youth workers around the world. At a time when the negative relationship between socio-economic inequality and levels of political participation is compounded by high youth unemployment or precarious employment in many countries, it is not surprising that new social media communications may be seen as a means to re-engage young citizens. This edited collection explores the influence of social media, such as YouTube, Facebook, and Twitter, upon the participatory culture of young citizens. This collection, comprising contributions from a number of leading international scholars in this field, examines such themes as the possible effects of social media use upon patterns of political socialization; the potential of social media to ameliorate young people's political inequality; the role of social media communications for enhancing the civic education curriculum; and evidence for social media manifesting new forms of political engagement and participation by young citizens. These issues are considered from a number of theoretical and methodological approaches but all attempt to move beyond simplistic notions of young people as an undifferentiated category of 'the internet generation'.
